Refund of fee on application for review of judgment.

14. Where an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the ninetieth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorising him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day.

Object—The apparent intention of this section is to require full stamp in every case of delay after the eighty-ninth day from the date of the decree, and to permit a refund at the discretion of the Judge when the delay is not due to the appellant's laches. 9 M. 134, 9 C L R. 479 ; 39 C. Refund where Court reverses or modifies its former decision on ground of mistake.

15. Where an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and where, on the rehearing, the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the [application] * as exceeds the fee payable on any other application to such Court under the second schedule to this Act No. 1, clause (b) or clause (d).

* The word has been substituted by Act XX of 1870.

But nothing in the former part of this section shall entitle the applicant to such certificate where the reversal or modification is due, wholly or in part, to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing.

Notes.—In order to attract the operation of this section the conditions requisite are that there should be an application for review of judgment, that it should have been admitted, that on the re-hearing the Court should have reversed or modified its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact and that such reversal or modification was not due to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing. 28 C. and delivers to such Authority a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if such Authority is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required, the said Authority may—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters if such stamp has not been already cancelled ;

(b) substitute another stamp for denoting the Court fee which should have been paid thereon ; and

(c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion.

Notes.—There is no grant of probate until the Court-fee is paid and the grant is issued to the party. 38 M 988=29 M. L. J 680. "The sum charged upon a grant of probate or of letters of administration, is not a tax or duty levied upon the property upon which the probate or administration operates, and it is not charged thereon as is Estate Duty in England, but it is merely a fee levied for the work done in this connection. And I do not think that this is any less the case because the fee is levied upon the value of the property." Per Greaves J. in 27 C. W. N. 812 at p. 815.

19B. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of such Authority that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less Court fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act, such Authority may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters.

But when, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the said Authority may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Notes.—Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority for the local area, in which the probate or letters of administration has or have been granted that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased an abatement in Court-fees should be allowed. 1 B. The father died intestate leaving certain money in a bank. The brother and the two sons applied for letters of administration with a certificate from the Registrar who as the Taxing Officer (under R. 4 of Chapter XXXV of the Rules and Orders of the Calcutta High Court) certified exemption of Court fees as "the property was held in trust not beneficially or with general power to confer a beneficial interest." On reference to Ghosh J. exemption was refused, (vide 29 C. W. Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a Court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the said Authority is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper Court-fee, the said Authority may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

Scope—This section contemplates an application on the part of the person who has taken out probate and produces the same to be duly stamped. The section further contemplates that the estimated value of the estate is less than what the value afterwards proved to be. (3) The Collector within the local limits of whose revenue-jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may at any time inspect or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of, the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made; and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under-estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent), and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and, if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under-estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation.

(4) If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector, the Collector may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made, to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property:

Provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by the section 277 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865,† or, as the case may be, by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.‡

(5) The Court, when so moved as aforesaid, shall hold, or cause to be held, an inquiry accordingly, and shall record a finding as to the true value, as near as may be, at which the property of the deceased should have been estimated The Collector shall be deemed to be a party to the inquiry.

(6) For the purposes of any such inquiry, the Court or person authorised by the Court to hold the inquiry may examine the petitioner for probate or letters of administration on oath (whether in person or by commission), and may take such further evidence as may be produced to prove the true value of the property The person authorized as aforesaid to hold the enquiry shall return to the Court the evidence taken by him, and report the result of the inquiry, and such report and the evidence so taken shall be evidence in the proceeding, and the Court may record a finding in accordance with the report, unless it is satisfied that it is erroneous.

(7) The finding of the Court recorded under sub-section (5) shall be final, but shall not bar the entertainment and disposal by the Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority of any application under section 19E.

(8) The local Government may make rules for the guidance of Collectors in the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (3).

ACT NO. XLVI OF 1920.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL IN COUNCIL.

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 17th September 1920.

An Act to enable Cutchi Memons to be governed in matters of succession and inheritance by the Mahommadan Law.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable those Cutchi Memons who so desire to be governed in matters of succession and inheritance by the Muhammadan law ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Preamble.

Object of the Legislation.—The Cutchi Memons claim that they are the descendants of the Muhammedans who settled in Cutch after migrating from the coast of Oman. Except for the historical fact that they were originally Hindus and were converted to Muhammedanism about four or five hundred years ago, they are at the present day good and strict Moslems It has been held by the Courts on more than one occasion since the judgment of Sir Erskine Perry in the year 1847, in what is commonly known as the Khojas and Memons' case, that in some particulars they are still governed by the Hindu Customs instead of Muhammadan Law. The Cutchi Memons have always felt aggrieved and considered the principle so established as incorrect both in law and in practice. Realising this grievance of the Cutchi Memons a Bill was brought in by Mr Justice Ameer Ali about the end of 1885. That Bill intended to make it permissive to the members of the Cutchi Memons community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law. The Bill provided for such a declaration to be made in a prescribed form. By reason of certain difference of opinion as to its provisions the Bill was not proceeded with. In the year 1896 another Bill was submitted to the Imperial Legislative Council. That Bill was drafted on practically the same lines as the Bill of 1885. The Government of India would appear to have been still of opinion that it would not be right to accept such a measure unless it were shown to be in accordance with the wishes of the entire community. The Bill was referred to a Select Committee. The Committee made its report on the Bill and the matter was allowed to rest there, and as no motion with respect to the Bill was made for 2 years the Bill was removed from the list of business on the 24th March 1900 by an order of the President under rule 43 of the rule [illegible] anner in which the Cutchi [illegible] it would appear that they [illegible] ulars by Muhammadan Law. THE DESTRUCTION OF RECORDS ACT, 1917.

AT NO. V OF 1917.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 28th February, 1917.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law providing for the destruction or other disposal of certain documents in the possession or custody of Courts and Revenue and other public officers.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law providing for the destruction or other disposal of certain documents in the possession or custody of Courts and Revenue and other public officers; It is hereby enacted as follows.

Object of the Legislation —In present conditions documents are required to be placed in the custody of a Government officer under a large number of enactments. In many of these Acts no provision exists for destruction of documents [illegible] mpanies under the Registration of Socie- [illegible] nce Societies Act (V of 1912), the Indian [illegible]), and the Indian Companies Act (VII of 1913; nor could such papers be dealt with under the destruction of Records Act, (III of 1879), as it stands. It is accordingly proposed to repeal and re-enact the Act of 1879 so as to make it conform to modern requirements. The principal feature of the draft Bill is that it empowers certain authorities to frame rules for the disposal by destruction or otherwise of documents which they may consider not of sufficient public value to justify preservation, and provides for the delegation to subordinate officers of the rule-making powers vested in the Local Government. The rule-making powers already vested in the High Courts and the Chief Controlling Revenue-Authorities by Act XIII of 1879 will not be affected by this Bill.—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Destruction of Records Act, 1917.

Definitions.

*2 In this Act—

(1) "The Chief Controlling Revenue-authority" means—

(a) in the Presidencies of Fort William in Bengal and For St. George and in the United Provinces and Bihar and Orissa,—the Board of Revenue ;

(c) in Sind,—the Commissioner ;

(d) In the Punjab and Burma,—the Financial Commissioner ; and (e) elsewhere,—the Local Government or such officer as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint in this behalf.

(2) "High Court" means the highest Civil Court of appeal in any local area.

3. (1) The authorities hereinafter specified may, from time to time, make rules for the disposal, by destruction or otherwise, of such documents as are, in the opinion of the authority making the rules, not of sufficient public value to justify their preservation.

(2) The authorities shall be—

(a) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of a High Court or of the Courts of Civil or Criminal jurisdiction subordinate thereto,—the High Court ;

(b) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of Revenue Courts and officers, the Chief Controlling authority ; and

(c) in the case of documents in the possession or custody of any other public officer,—the Local Government or any officer specially authorised in that behalf by the Local Government.

(3) Rules made under this section by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall be subject to the previous approval of the Governor General in Council, and rules made by any other High Court, or by a Chief Controlling Revenue Authority or by an officer specially authorized in that behalf by a Local Government, shall be subject to the previous approval of the Local Government

II—Jurisdiction

Matrimonial jurisdiction of High Courts to be exercised subject to Act

Exception.

4. The jurisdiction now exercised by the High Courts in respect of divorce a mensa et toro, and in all other causes, suits and matters matrimonial, shall be exercised by such Courts and by the District Courts subject to the provisions in this Act contained, and not otherwise; except so far as relates to the granting of marriage-licenses, which may be granted as if this Act had not been passed.

Scope—This section which provides that the jurisdiction in matters matrimonial shall be exercised according to the provisions of this Act and not otherwise, does not preclude the Court from considering whether a marriage was duly solemnized under the provisions of the Christian Marriage Act, and the Court can make a decree, declaring a marriage null and void on grounds other than those contained in s. 18 of this Act. 47 Ind Cas. 544 ; but see contra. 13 B. L R 112.

By section of the High Courts Act, such matrimonial jurisdiction was conferred on the High Courts as Her Majesty might by letters patent grant and direct and it was provided that save as by such letters patent might be otherwise directed and without prejudice to the legislative powers of the Governor General, the High Court in each Presidency should have exercised all jurisdiction and every power and authority whatsoever in any manner vested in any of the Supreme Courts. 20 Ind. Cas. 492=38 B 125. The ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Bombay Supreme Court was limited to persons described and distinguished by the appellation of British subjects, residing in the town and island of Bombay and the factories subordinate thereto and all the territories dependent upon the Government of Bombay. Ibid. It was held in Ardasur Cursetjee v. Perozeboye, 6 M. I A 348=4 W. R. (P. C) 91 that this jurisdiction could not be exercised over the Parsis. By clause 35 of the amended Letters Patent of the High Court, that decision was given effect to by limiting the jurisdiction within the Presidency to "matters matrimonial between our subjects professing the Christian religion" As regards the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court to admit petition for divorce where the parties reside within 24 parganas, vide 3 B. L R O. C. J. 67 ; 13 B. L R 109. As regards the jurisdiction of the Patna High Court, vide 3 P. L. R. 129=1913 Pat. 127=A. I. R. Pat. 1923, p. 301. This section continues the jurisdiction already possessed by the High Court at the date when the Act came into force. 94 Ind. Cas. 952.

Enforcement of decrees or orders made heretofore by Supreme or High Court.

5. Any decree or order of the late Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta, Madras or Bombay sitting on the ecclesiastical side, or of any of the said High Courts sitting in the exercise of their matrimonial jurisdiction, respectively, in any cause or matter matrimonial, may be enforced and dealt with by the said High Courts, respectively, as hereinafter mentioned, in like manner as if such decree or order had been originally made under this Act by the Courts so enforcing or dealing with the same.

Pending suits.

6. All suits and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial, which when this Act comes into operation, are pending in any High Court, shall be dealt with and decided by such Court, so far as may be, as if they had been originally instituted therein under this Act.

Court to act on principles of English Divorce Court.

7. Subject to the provisions contained in this Act, the High Courts and District Courts shall, in all suits and proceedings hereunder, act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Courts are, as nearly as may be, comformable to the principles and rules on which the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England for the time being acts and gives relief.

"Provided that nothing in this section shall deprive the said Courts of jurisdiction in a case where the parties to a marriage professed the Christian religion at the time of the occurrence of the facts on which the claim to relief is founded."*

Scope—This section is applicable not only to the grant of relief but also to question of procedure. 55 Ind Cas 259 ; 52 C 556=1925 Cal. 574, but see 30 C. 489 ; 37 C. 613. This section is a residuary section intended to provide for any matters which by inadvertence or otherwise are not dealt with in the Act. It is not unusual in statutory drafting to insert provisions of the nature exmajore cautela more especially where an attempt is being made to codify in this country an unfamiliar branch of English Law The expression "rules and principles" points rather to the rules and principles on which the Court deals with these matrimonial cases in requiring a certain degree for evidence and other cognate matters. 47 B. 843 =25 Bom. Extraordinary jurisdiction of High Court.

8. The High Court may, whenever it thinks fit, remove and try and determine as a Court of original jurisdiction any suit or proceeding instituted under this Act in the Court of any District Judge within the limits of its jurisdiction under this Act.

Power to transfer suits.

The High Court may also withdraw any such suit or proceeding, and transfer it for trial or disposal to the Court of any other such District Judge.

Scope.—Such District Judge must be subordinate to the High Court 40 B 109.

Reference to High Court

9. When any question of law, or usage having the force of law, arises at any point in the proceedings previous to the hearing of any suit under this Act by a District Court or at any subsequent stage of such suit, or in the execution of the decree therein or order thereon, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of parties, draw up a statement of the case, and refer it, with the Court's own opinion thereon, to the decision of the High Court.

If the question has arisen previous to or in the hearing, the District Court may either stay such proceedings, or proceed in the case pending such reference and pass a decree contingent upon the opinion of the High Court upon it.

If a decree or order has been made, its execution shall be stayed until the receipt of the order of the High Court upon such reference.

IV—Nullity of Marriage.

Petition for decree of nullity

18. Any husband or wife may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court, praying that his or her marriage may be declared null and void.

Grounds of decree.

19. Such decree may be made on any of the following grounds :—

* Inserted by Act 15 of 1927.

25. In every case of a judicial separation under this Act, the wife shall, whilst so separated, be considered as an unmarried woman for the purposes of contract, and wrongs and injuries, and suing and being sued in any civil proceeding; and her husband shall not be liable in respect of any contract, act or costs entered into, done, omitted, or incurred by her during the separation:

Separated wife deemed spinster for purposes of contract and suing.

Provided that where, upon any such judicial separation, alimony has been decreed or ordered to be paid to the wife, and the same is not duly paid by the husband, he shall be liable for necessaries supplied for her use:

Provided also that nothing shall prevent the wife from joining, at any time during such separation, in the exercise of any joint power given to herself and her husband.

Necessaries.—In Peter v. Fleming, 6 M. & W. 42, Baron Parke observed: "From the earliest time down to the present the word 'necessaries' is not confined in its strict sense to such articles as were necessary to support life, but extended to articles fit to maintain the particular person in the estate, decree and station in life in which he is and therefore we must not take the word 'necessaries' in its unqualified sense but with the qualification as above pointed out" This definition was adopted by the Exchequer Chambei Reversal of Decree of Separation.

26. Any husband or wife, upon the application of whose wife or husband, as the case may be, a decree of judicial separation has been pronounced, may, at any time thereafter, present a petition to the Court by which the decree was pronounced, praying for a reversal of such decree, on the ground that it was obtained in his or her absence, and that there was reasonable excuse for the alleged desertion, where desertion was the ground of such decree.

Decree of separation obtained during absence of husband or wife may be reversed.

The Court may, on being satisfied of the truth of the allegations of such petition, reverse the decree accordingly; but such reversal shall not prejudice or affect the rights or remedies which any other person would have had, in case it had not been decreed, in respect of any debts, contracts or acts of the wife incurred, entered into or done between the times of the sentence of separation and of the reversal thereof.

Notes.—This section empowers the Court to re-hear an ex-parte case in order to do justice to all the parties concerned.

VI.—Protection-orders.

27. Any wife to whom section 4 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865,* does not apply may, when deserted by her husband, present a petition to the District Court or the High Court, at any time after such desertion, for an order to protect any property which she may have acquired or may acquire, and any property of which she may have become possessed or may become possessed after such desertion, against her husband or his creditors, or any person claiming under him.

Deserted wife may apply to Court for protection.

Notes.—This section relates to protection order in case of desertion. Such an order may have retrospective effect. Elliot, In the goods of 40 L. J. Mat. 76; Ramsden v. Brerly, 10 Q. B. 142. An order protecting the earnings or property of a wife deserted by her husband is confined to money or property acquired by lawfull industry, and does not extend to property acquired by keeping a brothel. Mason v. Mitchel, 31 L J. Ex. 68. A wife who has obtained an order for protection is entitled to payment of a fund in Court, representing a legacy bequeathed to her. Kingsley, In re, 26 Beav. 84; Cooke v Fuller, 26 Beav. 99; Coward, In re, 44 L. Court may grant protection-order.

28. The Court, if satisfied of the fact of such desertion, and that the same was without reasonable excuse, and that the wife is maintaining herself by her own industry or property, may make and give to the wife an order protecting her earnings and other property from her husband and all creditors and persons claiming under him. Every such order shall state the time at which the desertion commenced, and shall, as regards all persons dealing with the wife in reliance thereon, be conclusive as to such time.

Notes.—The petition should state sufficient facts to satisfy the Court of the fact of desertion. Sewell, Exparte, 28 L J. Mat. 8. Notice of an application on the part of a wife, deserted by her husband, for a protection order, must be served on him if his whereabouts are known. Mathew v. Mathew, 19 L. T. 662. Mat. 251. A wife having been deserted by her husband, obtained a protection order. On her death, in the lifetime of her husband, intestate, the Court decreed letters of administration, limited to such personal property as she had acquired, or become possessed of since the desertion, without specifying of what that property consisted, to be granted to one of her next-of kin. Worman In the goods of, 1 Sw & Tr 513.

Discharge or variation of orders

29. The husband or any creditor of, or person claiming under him, may apply to the Court by which such order was made for the discharge or variation thereof, and the Court, if the desertion has ceased, or if for any other reason it thinks fit so to do, may discharge or vary the order accordingly.

Notes—A husband may come to the Divorce Court at any time, and apply for a discharge of the order. Hall Exparte, 27 L. J Mat 19 An application to discharge a protection order is not limited to the lifetime of the married woman. Mudge v. Adams, 50 L. J. P. 49=6 P. Liability of husband seizing wife's property after notice of order.

30. If the husband, or any creditor of, or person claiming under, the husband, seizes or continues to hold any property of the wife after notice of any such order, he shall be liable, at the suit of the wife (which she is hereby empowered to bring), to return or deliver to her the specific property, and also to pay her a sum equal to double its value.

31. So long as any such order of protection remains in force, the wife shall be and be deemed to have been, during such desertion of her, in the like position in all respects, with regard to property and contracts and suing and being sued, as she would be under this Act if she obtained a decree of judicial separation.

Notes.—On a petition presented by a wife, who had been deserted by her husband, to draw out of Court certain sums of money to which she became entitled: Held, that notice of the petition must be served upon the husband, notwithstanding that a protection order had been obtained protecting from the husband the property of the feme covert. Sutcliffe, Ex-parte. 22 W. R 676. An action is maintainable by wife for earnings after an order of a Police Magistrate upon desertion by her has been living in the time specified.

VII.—Restitution of Conjugal Rights.

32. When either the husband or the wife has, without reasonable excuse, withdrawn from the society of the other, either wife or husband may apply, by petition to the District Court or the High Court, for restitution of conjugal rights and the Court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements made in such petition, and that there is no legal ground why the application should not be granted, may decree restitution of conjugal rights accordingly.

J. Mat. 12. The measure of damages is the value of the wife of whom the husband has been deprived. Cowing v. Cowing, 33 L. J. Mat. 149. A claim for damages in a divorce suit is founded upon the hypothesis that the husband has suffered injury by being deprived of his wife's society through the wrongful act of the co-respondent. In order to award any damages it is necessary to find (1) that the husband has in fact been damnified; (2) that such damage has been brought about by the wrongful act of the co-respondent without any fault on the part of the husband. It is no part of the functions of the jury to punish the adulterer for his immorality. Their sole duty is to compensate the husband for the injury (if any) which he has suffered through the wrongful act of the co-respondent. If a husband has a virtuous wife taken from him by contrivance of another man, he is entitled to damages commensurate with the loss of such a wife; but if she has led a loose life before marriage, her value is not the same as that of a virtuous woman. In estimating the amount of damages to be awarded, the fact that the wife was earning money, of a portion of which the petitioner had the advantage may properly be taken into account. Derbishire v. Derbishire, 62 L. T. 664 Where the co respondent was ordered to pay certain sum to the petitioner as compensation and further sum into Court if he failed to marry the respondent, the direction as to further payment is bad. Power to order adulterer to pay costs.

35. Whenever in any petition presented by a husband, the alleged adulterer has been made a co-respondent, and the adultery has been established, the Court may order the co respondent to pay the whole or any part of the costs of the proceedings:

Provided that the co-respondent shall not be ordered to pay the petitioner's costs—

(1) if the respondent was, at the time of the adultery, living apart from her husband and leading the life of a prostitute, or

(2) if the co-respondent had not, at the time of the adultery, reason to believe the respondent to be a married woman.

Power to order litigious intervenor to pay costs.

Whenever any application is made under section 17, the Court, if it thinks that the applicant had no grounds or no sufficient grounds for intervening, may order him to pay the whole or any part of the costs occasioned by the application.

Costs.—Adultery committed by one co-respondent, condoned by the husband, is revived by subsequent adultery with another co-respondent. In such a case a decree nisi will be passed against both co-respondents. Costs will be given only against the co-respondent with whom the subsequent adultery was committed. 28 C. 221 Where wife is responsible for suit for divorce she can be made to pay husband's IX.—Alimony.

36. In any suit under this Act, whether it be instituted by a husband or a wife, and whether or not she has obtained an order of protection, the wife may present a petition for alimony pending the suit.

Alimony pendente lite.

Such petition shall be served on the husband; and the Court, on being satisfied of the truth of the statements therein contained, may make such order on the husband for payment to the wife of alimony pending the suit as it may deem just:

it shall in no case exceed one-fifth of three years next preceding the date of a decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage, until the decree is made absolute or is confirmed, as the case may be.

during which alimony it shall continue, in the made absolute. 36 C. 1081; 49 Ind. Cas. 209.

Amount of alimony.—This section provides that such alimony shall not exceed one fifth of the husband's net income. Net income has its ordinary meaning—the amount of income minus deductions on account of income tax, charges for pension fund and the like. Expenses of maintaining children and liquidation of debts may be taken into consideration in allotting the alimony 14 M 88; see also 6 C. W. N. 444; 36 C. 264; 11 Ind. Cas. 813; A. I. order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the Court, secure to the wife such gross sum of money, or exceeding her own life, as hav of the husband, and to the co for that purpose may cause a proper instrument to be executed by all necessary parties.

In every such case the Court may make an order on the husband for payment to the wife of such monthly or weekly sums for her maintenance and support as the Court may think reasonable:

Power to order monthly or weekly payments.

Provided that if the husband afterwards from any cause becomes unable to make such payments, it shall be lawful for the Court to discharge or modify the order, or temporarily to suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again to revive the same order wholly or in part, as to the Court seems fit.

Scope—This section limits the power of Court to make an order for permanent alimony to cases in which a decree has been made declaring a marriage to be dissolved or where a decree for judicial separation has been obtained by the wife. The section omits to give such power to the Court, where the decree declares the marriage null and void. 48 C. 636; see also A. I. R. 1935 Oudh 133. Subsequent

40. The High Court, after a decree absolute for dissolution of marriage, or a decree of nullity of marriage, and the District Court, after its decree for dissolution of marriage or of nullity of marriage has been confirmed, may inquire into the existence of ante-nuptial or post-nuptial settlements made on the parties whose marriage is the subject of the decree, and may make such orders with reference to the application of the whole or a portion of the property settled, whether for the benefit of the husband or the wife, or of the children (if any) of the marriage, or of both children and parents, as to the Court seems fit :

Provided that the Court shall not make any order for the benefit of the parents or either of them at the expense of the children.

Power to make orders as to custody of children in suit for separation

41. In any suit for obtaining a judicial separation the Court may from time to time, before making its decree, make such interim orders, and may make such provision in the decree as it deems proper with respect to the custody, maintenance, and education of the minor children, the marriage of whose parents is the subject of such suit, and may, if it thinks fit, direct proceedings to be taken for placing such children under the protection of the said Court.

CHAPTER I.

OF EASEMENTS GENERALLY.

"Easement" defined.

4. An easement is a right which the owner or occupier of certain land possesses, as such, for the beneficial enjoyment of that land, to do and continue to do something, or to prevent and continue to prevent something being done, in or upon, or in respect of, certain other land not his own.

Dominant and servient heritages and owners.

The land for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right exists is called the dominant heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the dominant owner ; the land on which the liability is imposed is called the servient heritage, and the owner or occupier thereof the servient owner.

Explanation.—In the first and second clauses of this section, the expression "land" includes also things permanently attached to the earth ; the expression "beneficial enjoyment" includes also possible convenience, remote advantage and even a mere amenity ; and the expression "to do something" includes removal and appropriation by the dominant owner for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, of any part of the soil of the servient heritage, or anything growing or subsisting thereon

* Section 3 has been substituted for the original section by Act X of 1914

Illustrations.

(a) A, as the owner of a certain house, has a right of way thither over his neighbour B's land for purposes connected with the beneficial enjoyment of the house. This is an easement,

(b) A, as the owner of a certain house, has the right to go on his neighbour B's land and to take water for the purposes of his house-hold out of a spring therein. This is an easement

(c) A, as the owner of a certain house, has the right to conduct water from B's stream to supply the fountains in the garden attached to the house. This is an easemennt.

(d) A, as the owner of a certain house and farm, has the right to graze a certain number of his own cattle on B's field or to take, for the purpose of being used in the house, by himself, his family, guests, lodgers and servants, water or fish out of C's tank, or timber out of D's wood, or to use, for the purpose of manuring his land the leaves which have fallen from the trees on E's land. These are easements.

(e) A dedicates to the public the right to occupy the surface of certain land for the purpose of passing and repassing. This right is not an easement

(f) A is bound to cleanse a water-course running through his land, and keep it free from obstruction for the benefit of B, a lower riparian owner. This is not an easement.

Easement—An easement may be defined to be a privilege without profit which the owner of one neighbouring tenement hath of another, existing in respect of their several tenements by which the servient owner is obliged "to suffer or not to do" something of his own land, for the advantage of the dominant owner. Gale on Easement, 8th Ed p 8. Considered with regard to the servient tenement, an easement is but a charge or obligation, curtailing the ordinary rights of property with regard to dominant tenement; it is a right accessorial to these ordinary rights constituting in both cases a new quality impressed upon the respective heritages. Gale on Easement, p. 9. An easement can only be claimed in relation to a property. Ibid.

Continuous and discontinuous, apparent and non-apparent easements.

5. Easements are either continuous or discontinuous, apparent or non apparent.

Easement for limited time or on condition

6. An easement may be permanent or for a term of years or other limited period, or subject to periodical interruption, or exercisable only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, or on condition that it shall commence or become void or voidable on the happening of a specified event or the performance or non-performance of a specified act.

Easements restrictive of certain rights.

7. Easements are restrictions of one or other of the following rights, (namely) :—

Exclusive right to enjoy

(a) The exclusive right of every owner of immovable property (subject to any law for the time being in force) to enjoy and dispose of the same and all products thereof and accessions thereto.

Rights to advantages arising from situation

Explanation.—A natural stream is a stream, whether permanent or intermittent, tidal or tideless, on the surface of land or underground, which flows by the operation of nature only and in a natural and known course.

Notes.—This right conferred by an easement attaches upon the soil of servient tenement ; the utmost extent of the obligation imposed upon the owner being not to alter the state of it so as to interfere with the enjoyment of the easement by the dominant. This obligation upon him is in fact negative—to suffer or not to do—ceasing altogether upon his ceasing to be the owner of the servient heritage ; and

Variety of easements.—The number or modifications of rights of this kind may be infinite both in their extent, and mode of enjoyment as the convenience of man. In using his property requires. "To descend now" says Lord Stair, "to the kinds of servitudes, there may be as many as there are ways whereby the liberty of a house or tenement may be restricted in favour of another tenement ; for liberty and servitude are contraries, and the abatement of the one is the being or enlarging of other." Cited in Gale on Easement, p 22 But no incidents of a novel kind can be devised and attached to property at the fancy or caprice of any owner. Per

THE IMPOSITION, ACQUISITION, AND TRANSFER OF EASEMENTS.

8. An easement may be imposed by any one in the circumstances, and to the extent, in and to which he may transfer interest in the heritage on which the liability to be imposed.

Who may impose easements.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tenant of B's land under a lease for an unexpired term of twenty years, and has power to transfer his interest under the lease. A may impose an easement on the land to continue during the time that the lease exists or for any shorter period.

(b) A is tenant for his life of certain land with remainder to B absolutely. A cannot, unless with B's consent, impose an easement thereon which will continue after the determination of his life-interest.

(c) A, B and C are co owners of certain land. A cannot without the consent of B and C, impose an easement on the land or on any part thereof.

(d) A and B are lessees of the same lessor. A of a field X for a term of five years, and B of a field Y for a term of ten years. A's interest under his lease is transferable; B's is not. A may impose on X, in favour of B a right of way terminable with A's lease.

Notes—An easement right can be conferred by the owner of the servient tenement for caste consideration. 27 Ind. Cas. 920. Under the Land Clause Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c 18) a limited owner had no power to grant an easement. 9. Subject to the provisions of section 8, a servient owner may impose on the servient heritage any easement that does not lesson the utility of the existing easement. But he cannot, without the consent of the dominant owner, impose an easement on the servient heritage which would lessen such utility.

11. No lessee or other person having a derivative interest may impose on the property held by him as such an easement to take effect after the expiration of his own interest, or in derogation of the right of the lessor or the superior proprietor.

Notes.—Vide notes under section 10.

Who may acquire easements.

12. An easement may be acquired by the owner of the immovable property for the beneficial enjoyment of which the right is created, or on his behalf, by any person in possession of the same.

One of two or more co-owners of immovable property, may, as such with or without the consent of the other or others, acquire an easement for the beneficial enjoyment of such property.

No lessee of immovable property can acquire, for the beneficial enjoyment of other immovable property of his own, an easement in or over the property comprised in his lease.

Notes—In Rangeley v. Midland Rail Co, (1868) L. R. 3 Ch 610 Lord Cairns observed : "There can be no easement, properly so called, unless there be both a servient and a dominant tenement An easement must be connected with a dominant tenement." The point decided by Ackroyd v. Smith, (1850) 10 C. B. 164, is that a right of way cannot be so granted as to pass to the successive owners of land, as such, in cases where the way is not connected in some manner with the enjoyment of the land, to which it is attempted to make it appertinent. Although a a tenement cannot acquire a prescriptive right of easement in the land belonging to his lessor, he may claim a right of easement based on immemorial user. 36 C L. 13. Where one person transfers or bequeathes immovable property to another,—

(a) if an easement in other immovable property of the transferor or testator is necessary for enjoying the subject of the transfer or bequest, the transferee or legatee shall be entitled to such easement ; or,

e) if an easement over the share of one of them is necessary for enjoying the share of another of them, the latter shall be entitled to such easement, or,

(f) if such an easement is apparent and continuous and necessary for enjoying the share of the latter as it was enjoyed when the partitions took effect, he shall, unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, be entitled to such easement.

Acquisition by prescription.

15. Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where support from one person's land, or things affixed thereto, has been peaceably received by another person's land subjected to artificial pressure, or by things affixed thereto, as an easement, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where a right of way or any other easement has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto, as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, support or other easement, shall be absolute.

Explanation II.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section unless where there is an actual cessation of the enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Explanation III.—Suspension of enjoyment in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners is not an interruption within the meaning of this section.

Explanation IV.—In the case of an easement to pollute water, the said period of twenty years begins when the pollution first prejudices perceptibly the servient heritage.

* In s 14 the italicised article a has been inserted by Act XII of 1891.

When the property over which a right is claimed under this section belongs to Government, this section shall be read as if for the words "twenty years," the words "sixty years" were substituted.

The plaintiff is entitled to judgment

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years The defendant proves that for a year of that time the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the servient heritage as lessee thereof and enjoyed the right as such lessee. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as an easement" for twenty years.

(c) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff, on one occasion during the twenty years had admitted that the user was not of right, and asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed "as of right" for twenty years.

Rights which cannot be acquired by prescription

17. Easements acquired under section 15 are said to be acquired by prescription, and are called prescriptive rights.

None of the following rights can be so acquired :—

(a) a right which would tend to the total destruction of the subject of the right, or the property on which, if the acquisition were made, liability would be imposed ;

(b) a right to the free passage of light or air to an open space of ground ;

(c) a right to surface-water not flowing in a stream and not permanently collected in a pool, tank or otherwise ;

(d) a right to underground water not passing in a defined channel.

Clause (a)—In Hall v. Nottingham, (1875) 1 Ex. D. 1. the possibility that the custom there set up might have the effect of taking away from the owner of the freehold the whole use and enjoyment of his property was not thought a sufficient ground for disallowing it. "The mere possibility that after many years the number Customary easements.

18. An easement may be acquired in virtue of a local custom. Such easements are called customary easements.

CHAPTER III.

THE INCIDENTS OF EASEMENTS.

Rules controlled by contract or title.

20. The rules contained in this chapter are controlled by any contract between the dominant and servient owners relating to the servient heritage, and by the provisions of the instrument of decree (if any) by which the easement referred to was imposed.

Incidents of customary easements.

And when any incident of any customary easement is inconsistent with such rules, nothing in this Chapter shall affect such incident.

Notes.—There can be no question of easement as regards light and air in the case of joint property. 28 Bom. L. R. 1000=97 Ind. Cas. 691=A. I. (b) A, as owner of a certain house, has a right of way to and from it. For the purpose of passing to and from the house, the right may be used, not only by A, but by the members of his family, his guests, lodgers, servants, workmen, visitors, and customers , for this is a purpose connected with the enjoyment of the dominant heritage. So if A lets the house, he may use the right of way for the purpose of collecting the rent and seeing that the house is kept in repair.

Exercise of easement.

22 The dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner ; and when the exercise of an easement can without detriment to the dominant owner , be confined to a determinant part of the servient heritage, such exercise shall, at the request of the servient owner, be so confined.

Right to alter mode of enjoyment.

23. Subject to the provisions of section 22, the dominant owner may, from time to time, alter the mode and place of enjoying the easement provided that he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Exception.—The dominant owner of a right of way cannot vary his line of passage at pleasure, even though he does not thereby impose any additional burden on the servient heritage.

Right to do acts to secure enjoyment.

24. The dominant owner is entitled, as against the servient owner, to do all acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of the easement ; but such acts must be done at such time and in such manner as, without detriment to the dominant owner, to cause the servient owner as little inconvenience as possible, and the dominant owner must repair as far as practicable, the damage (If any) caused by the act to the servient heritage.

Rights to do acts necessary to secure the full enjoyment of an easement are called accessory rights.

Liability for expenses necessary for preservation of easement.

25. The expenses incurred in constructing works, or making repairs, or doing any other act necessary for the use or preservation of an easement, must be defrayed by the dominant owner.

Notes.—As a general rule, easements impose no personal obligation upon the owner of the servient tenement, to do anything, the burden of repair falls upon the owner of the dominant tenement. Gale on Easements, p 475. Liability for damage from want of repair.

26. Where an easement is enjoyed by means of an artificial work, the dominant owner is liable to make compensation for any damage to the servient heritage arising from the want of repair of such work.

Notes.—"Where the enjoyment of the easement is had by an artificial work (opus manufactum) the owner of the dominant tenement is liable for any damages arising from its want of repair. Gale on Easements, p 476 ; see also Bell v. Twenty-man (1841) 1 Q. It would appear to be more accurate to say that if the dominant owner can not exercise the easement strictly within its limits, without repairing the artificial work he must do the necessary repairs if he wishes to exercise the easement. Gale on Easements, p. 476.

27. The servient owner is not bound to do anything for the benefit of the dominant heritage, and he is entitled, as against the dominant owner, to use the servient heritage in any way consistent with the enjoyment of the easement; but he must not do any act tending to restrict the easement, or to render its exercise less convenient.

Servient owner not bound to do anything.

(a) A, as a owner of a house, has a right to lead water and send sewage through B's land. B is not bound, as servient owner, to clear the watercourse, or scour the sewer.

(b) A grants a right of way through his land to B as owner of a field. A may feed his cattle on grass growing on the way, provided that B's right of way is not thereby obstructed, but he must not build a wall at the end of his land so as to prevent B from going beyond it, nor must he narrow the way so as to render the exercise of the right less easy than it was at the date of the grant.

(c) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to an easement of support from B's wall. B is not bound, as servient owner to keep the wall standing and in repair. But he must not pull down or weaken the wall so as to make it incapable of rendering the necessary support.

(d) A, in respect of his mill is entitled to a watercourse through B's land. B must not drive stakes so as to obstruct the watercourse.

(e) A, in respect of his house, is entitled to a certain quantity of light passing over B's land. B must not plant trees so as to obstruct the passage to A's windows of that quantity of light.

28. With respect to the extent of easements and the mode of their enjoyment, the following provisions shall take effect:—

Extent of easements.

Easement of necessity.

An easement of necessity is co extensive with the necessity as it existed when the easement was imposed.

Other easements.

The extent of any other easement and the mode of its enjoyment must be fixed with reference to the probable intention of the parties, and the purpose for which the right was imposed or acquired.

In the absence of evidence as to such intention and purpose—

Right of way.

(a) a right of way of any one kind does not include a right of way of any other kind:

Right to light or air acquired by grant.

(b) the extent of a right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door, or other opening, imposed by a testamentary or non-testamentary instrument, is the quantity of light or air that entered the opening at the time the testor died or the non-testamentary instrument was made:

Prescriptive right to light or air.

(c) the extent of a prescriptive right to the passage of light or air to a certain window, door or other opening is that quantity of light or air which has been accustomed to enter that opening during the whole the prescriptive period irrespectively of the purposes for which it has been

(d) the extent of a prescriptive right to pollute air or water is the extent of the pollution at the commencement of the period of user on completion of which the right arose: and Prescriptive right to pollute air and water.

Other prescriptive rights.

Notes.—The accessorial right which the law thus confers is to be measured by the nature of the grant or reservation to which it is incident. Doud v. Kings Cote, (1840) 6 M. & W. 174; Corporation of London v. Riggs, L. R. 13 Ch. D. 798; Ray v. Hazeldine, (1904) 2 Ch. 17. 29. The dominant owner cannot, by merely altering or adding to the dominant heritage, substantially increase an easement.

Increase of easement.

Where an easement has been granted or bequeathed so that its extent shall be proportionate to the extent of the dominant heritage, if the dominant heritage is increased by alluvion, the easement is proportionately increased, and, if the dominant heritage is diminished by diluvion, the easement is proportionately diminished.

Save as aforesaid, no easement is affected by any change in the extent of the dominant or the servient heritage.

Notes—As every easement is a restriction upon the rights of property of the owner of the servient tenement, no alteration can be mads in the mode of enjoyment by the owner of the dominant heritage, the effect of which will be to increase such restriction. Ankerson v. Conally, (1906) 2 Ch. 544; (1907) 1 Ch. 678; see also A. Where a dominant heritage is divided between two or more persons, the easement becomes annexed to each of the shares, but not so as to increase substantially the burden of the servient heritage: provided that such annexation is consistent with the terms of the instrument, decree, or revenue-proceeding (if any) under which the division was made, and, in the case of prescriptive rights, with the user during the prescriptive period.

Right to enjoyment without disturbance.

32 The owner or occupier of the dominant heritage is entitled to enjoy the easement without disturbance by any other person.

Suit for disturbance of easement

33. The owner of any interest in the dominant heritage, or the occupier of such heritage, may institute a suit for compensation for the disturbance of the easement or of any right accessory thereto, provided that the disturbance has actually caused substantial damage to the plaintiff.

Explanation I.—The doing of any act likely to injure the plaintiff by affecting the evidence of the easement, or by materially diminishing the value of the dominant heritage, is substantial damage within the meaning of this section and section 34.

Explanation II.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of light passing to the openings in a house, no damage is substantial within the meaning of this section, unless it falls within the first Explanation, or interferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff or prevents him from carrying on his accustomed business in the dominant heritage as beneficially as he had done previous to instituting the suit.

Explanation III.—Where the easement disturbed is a right to the free passage of air to the openings in a house, damage is substantial within the meaning of this section if it inteferes materially with the physical comfort of the plaintiff, though it is not injurious to his health.

Illustrations.

(a) A places a permanent obstruction in a path over which B, as tenant of C's house, has a right of way. This is substantial damage to C, for it may affect the evidence of his reversionary right to the easement.

(b) A, as owner of a house, has a right to walk along one side of B's house. B builds a verandah overhanging the way about ten feet from the ground, and so as not to occasion any inconvenience to foot-passengers using the way. This is not substantial damage to A.

CHAPTER V.

THE EXTINCTION, SUSPENSION AND REVIVAL OF EASEMENT.

37. When, from a cause which preceeded the imposition of an easement, the person by whom it was imposed ceases to have any right in the servient heritage, the easement is extinguished.

Extinction by dissolution of right of servient owner.

(a) it was intended for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, to whatever extent the easement should be used ; or

(b) the injury caused to the servient owner by the change is so slight that no reasonable person would complain of it ; or

(c) the easement is an easement of necessity.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to an easement entitling the dominant owner to support of the dominant heritage,

Notes.—"By the civil law, the mere destruction either of the dominant or servient tenement extinguished a servitude, though it was held to revive if the house was built on the same site and of the same dimensions as before." Gale on Easements, p. 502. If "any alteration be made in the disposition of the dominant tenement, of such a nature as to make it incapable any longer of the perception of the particular easements the status of the dominant tenement, to which the easement was attached, and which is an inherent condition of its existence, is determined." Gale on Easements, p. 521. An easement of light and air for windows is not extinguished on demolition of a wall which was re-built without delay. A. I. R 1925 Bom. 3=24 Bom. L. R. 83=46 B. 448=67 Ind. Cas. 250. Raising a water spout to a height of about 2½ to 4ft. throws no additional burden on the servient tenement, so as to destroy easement. A. I. R. 1927 Lah 492 ; see also A. I. Extinction on permanent alteration of servient heritage by superior force.

44. An easement is extinguished where the servient heritage is by superior force so permanently altered that the dominant owner can no longer enjoy such easement :

Provided that, where a way of necessity is destroyed by superior force, the dominant owner has a right to another way over the servient heritage, and the provisions of section 14 apply to such way.

Notes—A tenant may have a customary right or customary easement to irrigate his lands with water from his landlord's tank but where owing to natural causes the tank becomes unfit for use as an irrigation source, such right becomes extinguished under this section. 56 Ind Cas 598.

Extinction by destruction of either heritage.

45. An easement is extinguished when either the dominant or the servient heritage is completely destroyed.

Illustrations.

A has a right of way over a road running along the foot of a sea-cliff. The road is washed away by a permanent encroachment of the sea. A's easement is extinguished.

Notes—"By the civil law, the mere destruction either of the dominant or servient tenement extinguished a servitude, though it was held to revive if the house was built on the same site and of the same dimensions as before."—Gale on Easements, p. 502 ; A I. R. 1931 Bom 490=33 Bom. L. R. 1114.

Extinction by unity of ownership.

46. An easement is extinguished when the same person becomes entitled to the absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient heritages.

Illustrations.

(a) A, as the owner of a house, has a right of way over B's field. A mortgages his house, and B mortgages his field, to C. Then C forecloses both mortgages and becomes thereby absolute owner of both house and field. The right of way is extinguished, (b) The dominant owner acquires only part of the servient heritage : the easement is not extinguished, except in the case illustrated in section 41.

(c) The servient owner acquires the dominant heritage in connection with a third person : the easement is not extinguished.

(d) The separate owners of two separate dominant heritages jointly acquire the heritage which is servient to the two separate heritages ; the easements are not extinguished.

(e) The joint owners of the dominant heritage jointly acquire the servient heritage ; the easement is extinguished.

(f) A single right of way exists over two servient heritages for the beneficial enjoyment of a single dominant heritage. The dominant owner acquires only one of the servient heritages The easement is not extinguished

(g) A has a right of way over B's road B dedicates ths road to the public. A's right of way is not extinguished.

Notes—A man can not acquire a right of easement upon his own land, and possibly this may extend also to joint co-sharership of land. In order to extinguish an easement, it is necessary that some person should be entitled to absolute ownership of the whole of the dominant and servient tenements, so that a mere acquisition of qualified ownership on the one hand or partial ownership on the other would not extinguish an easement. A W N. 1887, 260. The unity of the dominant and servient estates in the same person extinguishes the easement appurtenant to the dominant estate. A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 8=36 C L. J. 161=70 Ind. Cas. 663=50 C. 356 ; see also A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 249.

Extinction by non-enjoyment. 47. A continuous easement is extinguished when it totally ceases to be enjoyed as such for an unbroken period of twenty years.

A discontinuous easement is extinguished when for a like period, it has not been enjoyed as such.

Such period shall be reckoned, in the case of a continuous easement from the day on which its enjoyment was obstructed by the servient owner, or rendered impossible by the dominant owner ; and, in the case of a discontinuous easement, from the day on which it was last enjoyed by any person as dominant owner :

Provided that, if, in the case of a discontinuous easement, the dominant owner, within such period, registers, under the Indian Registration Act, 1877* a declaration of his intention to retain such easement, it shall not be extinguished until a period of twenty years has elapsed from the date of the registration.

Where an easement can be legally enjoyed only at a certain place, or at certain times, or between certain hours, or for a particular purpose, its enjoyment during the said period at another place, or at other times, or between other hours or for another purpose, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

The circumstance that, during the said period, no one was in possession of the servient heritage, or that the easement could not be enjoyed, or that a right accessory thereto was enjoyed, or that the dominant owner was not aware of its existence, or that he enjoyed it in ignorance of his right to do so, does not prevent its extinction under this section.

An easement is not extinguished under this section—

(a) where the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the [illegible] in co-ownership, and one of the [illegible] eriod ; or ([illegible]) where the easement is a necessary easement.

Where several heritages are respectively subject to rights of way for the benefit of a single heritage, and the ways are continuous, such rights shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a single easement.

Illustration.

A has, as annexed to this house, rights of way from the high road thither over the heritages X and Z and the intervening heritage Y. Before the twenty years expires,

* Act III of 1877 was repealed and re-enacted by the Indian Registration Act 1908 (XVI of 1908)

A exercises his right of way over X. His rights of way over Y and Z are not extinguished.

Notes—This section comes into operation only where an easement has been acquired under section 15, 9 Bom. L. R. 1101. Where the easement in question is not an easement of necessity, but is an ordinary easement, it is liable to be extinguished by non-user for more than 20 years. 45 Bom. 80=22 Bom L. R. 415=57 Ind. Cas. 143. Once the existence of an easement is shown, it is for the other party to show under this section that it interrupted that easement more than 20 years ago or that the plaintiff rendered its use impossible. 31 Ind. Cas. 982. An easement is not extinguished, when the cessation is in pursuance of a contract between the dominant and servient owners. 34 P. L. R. 1918=45 Ind. Cas. 618. A mere diversion is not obstruction. 13 A. L. J. 821. When an easement right to the water in a stream is not enjoyed for 20 years continuously, the right is extinguished. A. I. R. 1923 Mad 674=18 M. L. W. 404=73 Ind. Cas. 66. Where a prescriptive right to light and air lost through abandonment, depends on the intention of the parties to be gathered from the circumstances and the interval of non-user. 49 Ind. Cas. 752.

Extinction of accessory rights.

48. When an easement is extinguished, the rights (if any) accessory thereto are also extinguished.

Illustration.

A has an easement to draw water from B's well. As accessory thereto, he has a right of way over B's land to and from the well. The easement to draw water is extinguished under section 47. The right of way is also extinguished.

Suspension of easement.

49. An easement is suspended when the dominant owner becomes entitled to possession of the servient heritage for a limited interest therein, or when the servient owner becomes entitled to possession of the dominant heritage for a limited interest therein.

Notes.—According to ss. 49 and 51, an easement suspended for more than 20 years would be destroyed. So where the servient owner was in possession both of the dominant and servient heritages for a period of 20 years, the right of easement (a right of way) becomes extinguished. (1913) M. W. N. 95=16 Ind. Cas 375

Servient owner not entitled to require continuance.

50. The servient owner has no right to require that an easement be continued, and, notwithstanding the provisions of section 26, he is not entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of the extinguishment or suspension of the easement, if the dominant owner has given to the servient owner such notice as will enable him, without unreasonable expense, to protect the servient heritage from such damage.

Compensation for damage caused by extinguishment.

Where such notice has not been given, the servient owner is entitled to compensation for damage caused to the servient heritage in consequence of such extinguishment or suspension.

Revival of easements.

51. An easement extinguished under section 45 revives (a) when the destroyed heritage is, before twenty years have expired, restored by the deposit of alluvion; (b) when the destroyed heritage is a servient building and before twenty years have expired such building is rebuilt upon the same site; and (c) when the destroyed heritage is a dominant building and before twenty years have expired, such building is rebuilt upon the same site and in such a manner as not to impose a greater burden on the servient heritage

An easement extinguished under section 46 revives when the grant or bequest by which the unity of ownership was produced is set aside by the decree of a competent Court. A necessary easement extinguished under the same section revives when the unity of ownership ceases from any other cause.

A suspended easement revives if the causes of suspension are removed before the right is extinguished under section 47.

LICENSES.

"License" defined

52. Where one person grants to another, or to definite number of other persons, a right to do, or continue to do, in or upon the immovable property of the grantor, something which would, in the absence of such right, be unlawful, and such right does not amount to an easement or an interest in the property, the right is called a license.

Notes—"A dispensation or license properly passes no interest nor alters or transfers any property in anything but only makes an action lawful which without it had been unlawful. A license to go beyond the seas, to hunt in a man's park to come into his house, are only actions which without license had been unlawful. But a license to hunt in a man's park and carry away the deer killed to his own use, to cut down a tree in a man's ground and to carry it away the next day after to his own use, are licenses as to the acts of hunting and cutting down the tree; but as to the carring away of the deer killed and tree cut down, they are grants." Thomas v. Sorrel, (1679) Vough 351; see also Musket v Hill, (1839) 5 Bing. Accessory licenses annexed by law.

According to him the first period is from the primitive time up to the 12th century, thence to the sixteenth, thence to the seventeenth, thence to 1790 A D , thence to 1830, and thence to the present time. As regards development during the first period no reliable data are available —though certain rules can be traced up to that earliest time The next three centuries marked the establishment of the trial by jury and [illegible] separation of the process of pleading and procedure from that of proof, Between 1500 A. D. and 1700 A. D., the foundation of the present system was laid. During that period we find the regulation of the competency of witnesses, the rules of privileges, and privileged communications, the rules for attorneys, the compulsory attendance of witnesses, the privilege against self-criminations, the parol evidence rule and the enactments of the Statute of Frauds. The fourth period of ninety years, saw the final establishment of cross-examination by counsel, the rule for the impeachment and corroboration of witness, the "best evidence" doctrine, and the publication of the first treatise on the law of evidence, by chief Baron Gilbert. Origin of the Law of Evidence—In the submission of the facts which constitute the evidence in a case, there have been embarrassments real and imaginary, which have resulted in the development of a set of rules. These rules relate to the use of such facts in Court as

It must not be supposed that these excluding rules came into existence all at once. The development of the jury into its final shape was a gradual one; and the growth of rules governing the use of evidence before the jury was equally gradual. PART I

RELEVANCY OF FACTS

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This act may be called the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Extent.

It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court, including Court-martial, "other than Court martial convened under the Army Act" "the Naval Discipline Act or that Act as modified by the Indian Navy (Discipline Act) Act, 1934* [or the Air Force Act] † but not to affidavits presented to any Court or officer, nor to proceedings before an arbitrator.

Commencement of Act

And it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872.

Legislative Changes—The words within quotations have been added by Act 18 of 1919 Application—It extends to the whole of British India For definition of the term of British India vide Act X of 1907 s. 7. It has been declared in force in the Santhal P. n the Angul Dis . 1 of 1900, s 4 racts, as regards ls, by Reg. 5 o ition) by Act 1 2 of 1913, s 3.

Judicial proceedings.—"An enquiry is judicial if the object of it is to determine a jural relation between one person and another, or a group of persons, or between him and the community generally; but even a Judge acting without such an object in view is not acting judicially" 12 B. 36; see also 15 M 138.

Court—For definition of the term vide s 3

Affidavits.—A declaration in the shape of affidavits cannot be received as discretionary powers are be proved by affidavit; hearing or trial on such when the opposite party bonafide desires to cross-examine a witness, and the witness can be produced, such witness's evidence shall not be allowed to be given by affidavit." Powell, p. 695.

Courts Martial.—The rules of evidence as contained in this Act do not apply to Courts martial held either under 38 Vict c 7. or under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 58. Courts-Martial must adopt the same rules of evidence as those followed in the Courts of ordinary criminal jurisdiction in England Powell, p. 28.

Arbitrator—Vide 11 M 85; 1 W. R. 12, but see 4 C. 231.

Repeal of enactments.

2. On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed :—

(1) all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India;

* Added by Act XXXV of 1934 † Added by Act X of 1927.

(2) all such rules, laws and regulations as have acquired the force of law under the 25th section of the Indian Councils Act, 1861,* in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for; and

(3) the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto, to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule.

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context:—

"Court"

"Court" includes all Judges and Magistrates, and all persons, except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence.

"Fact"

"Fact" means and includes—

(1) any thing, state of things, or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses;

(2) any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

Illustrations.

(a) That there are certain objects arranged in a certain order in a certain place, is a fact

(b) That a man heard or saw something, is a fact.

(c) That a man said certain words, is a fact.

(d) That a man holds a certain opinion, has a certain intention, acts in good faith, or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense, or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular sensation, is a fact.

(e) That a man has a certain reputation, is a fact.

"Relevant".

One fact is said to be relevant to another when the one is connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts.

"Facts in issue."

The expression "facts in issue" means and includes—any fact from which, either by itself or in connection with other facts, the existence, non-existence, nature or extent of any right, liability, or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows.

Explanation.—Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure, † any Court records an issue of fact the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue.

At his trial the following facts may be in issue:—

that A caused B's death;
that A intended to cause B's death;
that A had received grave and sudden provocation from B; that A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death, was, by reason of uusoundness of mind incapable of knowing its nature.

"Document." "Document" means any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter.

Illustrations

A writing is a document ·
Words printed, lithographed or photographed are documents :

"Evidence" "Evidence." means and includes—

(1) all statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses, in relation to matters of fact under inquiry :
such statements are called oral evidence ;
(2) all documents produced for the inspection of the Court ; such documents are called documentary evidence.

"Proved". A fact is said to be proved when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist, or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

"Disproved" A fact is said to be disproved when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non-existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist.

"Not proved." A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved.

Fact—"Ordinarily, a fact is something done or which has come to pass ; an act or deed or event, an effect produced or a result achieved . anything regarded as strictly true or actually existent, whether material or mental ; reality ; actuality. In legal use it includes the fact that any mental condition, of which any person is conscious, exists. The legal meaning is not limited to what is tangible or visible or in any way the object of sense Things invisible, mere thoughts, intentions fancies of the mind, when conceived of as existing or being true, are conceived of as facts.
idea of what a legal fact is in its relation to ratiocination must be the recognition that is not self contained, and that it presents no connection with the object to which it necessarily relates That object is fact or matter of fact".—Burr Jones, Ev 66.

Relevant—"The relevant facts are facts other than facts in issue which are in the eye of the law so connected with or related to the facts in issue that they render the latter probable or improbable, or roughly throw light upon them. Relevancy may indeed be considered as synonymous with "connection", a word which frequently appears in discussions on the subject. Of course both words must be taken in their legal meaning, which is generally restricted Common sense of logical relevancy is, as a rule, wider than legal relevancy A Judge might, in ordinary transaction take one fact as evidence of another, and act upon it himself, when, in Court, he would rule that it was legally irrelevant And he may exclude facts, although relevant if they appear to him too remote to be really material to the issue." Cockle Cas. 56. The first condition which a fact, proof of which as evidentiary fact is offered, must fulfill, is that it must be evidential of the main fact. It must furnish a basis from which the main fact can be inferred. The first duty of the Court is to apply the underlying principle of the law of evidence, namely, logical relevancy for the purpose of determining whether or not the fact offered can be evidence. If the fact meet this test, it may or may not be admitted. For flanked round the general principle on the law of evidence that what is logically relevant is admissible, are numerous excluding rules which say that this or that fact, though logically relevant, is inadmissible. The jury, as a feature of the English judicial system, is responsible for the existence of many of these rules, though each has its own peculiar principle upon which it is founded. These rules and their application form a large portion of the bar of evidence—Mckelvy's Law of Evidence, p. 13. The word "relevant" in this Act means admissible. Per Lord Hobhouse in Lala Laksmi v. Chand Haidar Shah, 3 C. W. N. 268 (notes).

Facts in issue—Facts in issue are those which are alleged by one party and denied by the other on the pleading in a civil case; or alleged in the indictment and denied by the plea of "not guilty," in a criminal cause, so far as they are in either case material. There is, therefore, little difficulty in ascertaining what are the facts in issue. Cockle Cas 56 Facts in issue are those facts which are necessary by law to establish the claim, liability, or defence, forming the subject-matter of the proceedings and which, either by the pleadings or by implication, are in dispute between the parties. Facts in issue are determinable primarily by the substantive law, and secondly by the pleadings. Phip, Ev. 53.

Documents—The term 'document' is one of difficult definition, many so-called documents being more properly classed under the head of real evidence. Best defines "document" as including "all material substance on which the thoughts of men are represented by writing or any other species of conventional mark or symbol" and expressly includes milkman's score, exchequer tallies and the like (Best s 215). Wharton defines "docun

others. Best. 213 The definition given in this Act is wider than the definition mentioned in Stephen's Digest. The definition seems to include all these things mentioned above. This definition applies to the word as used in s. 2 (b) of the Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931. A. I. R. 1934 All. 1031 = 1934 Cr. C. 1338.

Evidence—This definition is open to the criticism that it does not include those facts which in judicial proceedings may be addressed directly to the sense of the Court or jury. (Burr Jones Ev. s 3) Says Professor Greenleaf "Evidence in legal acceptation includes all the means by which alleged matter, of by reasoning or a reference to which is noticed without proof as the basis of inference in ascertaining some other matter of fact." (3 Harv. Law Rev, 143).

Proved.—A fact is said to be proved, when after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes it to exist or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists. A muchs tricter degree of proof is requireds in criminal proceedings than in civil ones, and in criminal proceedings the persuasion of guilt must amount to such a moral certainty as convinces the mind of the tribunal as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt. It is the business of the prosecution to bring guilt home to the accused, to the satisfaction of the minds of the jury, but the doubt, to the benefit of which the accused is entitled, must be such as a rational, thinking, sensible man may fairly and reasonably entertain, not the doubt, of a vacillating mind, that has not the moral courage to decide, "but shelters in a vain and idle scepticism" There must be doubts which a man may honestly and conscientiously entertain 3 L B. R. 216=4 Cr. L. J 382 "There is a strong and marked difference as to the effect of evidence in civil and criminal proceedings. In the former a mere preponderance of probability, due regard being had to the burden of proof is a sufficient basis of decision: but in the latter, especially when the offence charged amounts to treason or felony, a much higher degree of assu*rance is required. The serious consequence of an erroneous condemnation,* both to accused and society, the immeasurably greater evils which flow from it than from an erroneous acquittal have induced the laws of every wise and civilised nation to lay down the principle, though often lost sight of in practice, that the persuasion of guilt ought to amount to a moral certainty; or as an eminent judge expressed it, 'such a moral certainty, as convinces the minds of the tribunal, as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt' The expression 'moral certainty' is here used in contra-distinction to physical certainty, or certainty properly so called; for the physical possibility of the innocence of any accused person can never be excluded. Best § 95. See also 5 W R. Cr. 28; 21 W. R. Cr. 13; 4 W. R. Cr 19; 7 W R. Cr. 14; 11 W. R Cr. 20; 11 C. 642; 22 C 323; 8 C W. Matters before it — [illegible] intentionally refrained from using the wor[illegible] l instead the words, "matters before it." For [illegible] Court The admission would not come within the definition of the word "evidence" as given in this Act but still it is a matter which the Court before whom the admission was made would have to take into consideration in order to determine whether the particular fact was proved or not" Per Mitter J in 9 C 363=12 C L R 490 Therefore in determining what is evidence other than "evidence" in the phraseology of the Act, [illegible] knowledge into a case. 3 I. A. 286; 11 M. I A 213; 22 W. R 9; 24 W. R. 81; 24 W. R. Cr 28

Distinction between proof and evidence —The word "evidence' in legal acceptation, includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact the truth of which is submitted to investigation is established or disproved This term, and the word proof, are often used indifferently, as synonymous with each other; but the latter is applied by the most accurate logicians to the effect of evidence, and not to the medium by which truth is established None but mathematical truth is susceptible of that high degree of evidence, called demonstration which excludes all possibility of error, and which, therefore, may reasonably be required in support of every mathematical deduction Matters of fact are proved by moral evidence alone, by which is meant not only that kind of evidence which is employed on subject, connected with moral conduct, but all the evidence which is not obtained either from intention or from demonstration In the ordinary affairs of life, we do not require demonstrative evidence, because it is not inconsistent with the nature of the subject and to insist upon it would be unreasonable and absurd The most that can be affirmed of such things is, that there is no reasonable doubt concerning them The true question, therefore, in trials of facts is not whether it is possible that the testimony may be false but whether there is sufficient possibility of its truth; that is, whether the facts are shown by competent and satisfactory evidence. Things established by competent and satisfactory evidence are said to be proved—Greenleaf on the Law of Evidence, p 4

"May presume". 4. Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it :

"Shall presume."

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved :

"Conclusive proof."

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it.

Presumption.—"A presumption is an inference as to a matter of fact which a Judge draws, or directs a jury to draw, as a matter of law."—Powell, 387. "Presumptions are aids to reasoning and argumentation, which assume the truth of certain matters of this purpose of some enquiry They may be grounded on general experience or probability of any kind ; or merely on policy and convenience. those prima facie assumptions are to the duty of going forward, in argu which they relate...Presumptions are although for the time being they ac assumption, taking for granted, are simply so many names for an act or process which aids or shortens inquiry and argument." Thayer Cas. 38.

Division of presumption—English text writers divides presumptions into three classes .—(1) Presumption of fact (2) Rebuttable presumption of law and (3) Irrebuttable presumption of law. See also A. I. R. 1932 Mad. 343=62 M L. J. 511.

May presume.—The first class of presumption, mentioned by English text writers comes under this definition. It is nothing more than an argument more or less cogent ; it is an inference of one fact drawn from other facts. (Vide Powell, 386).

Shall presume—A presumption of law must be distinguished from prima facie evidence of fact. The latter no doubt seems to shift the burden of proof. A presumption of law can also be rebutted. But until it is rebutted, the presumption, Statute or by judicial legislation. Best, 304.

Conclusive proof—On the other hand an irrebuttable presumption of law is no presumption at all ; it is simply an indisputable proposition of law. For example, the rule that a child under seven cannot commit a crime is a rigid rule of law—in fact, part of the definition of crime. (Powell, 386). Conclusive proof is restricted to matters so declared. A. I. R. 1932 All. 35=1931 P. L. J. 360.

mination of the facts in issue. It happens that in the almost innumerable cases that are tried, certain facts or groups of fact have been repeatedly presented to Courts as foundations for inferences ; and the inferences being reasonable ones, judged by experience of the Court and Jury, have been repeatedly drawn until a rule has crystalised. It is not difficult to see why these developed so early and were so readily adopted by the Courts. Judg Jurors and have seized every opportunity to to control their conclusions from the evidence was supposedly nothing if not logical, while open to influences of prejudice, sympathy, and a thousand other things. Logical inference was therefore made a basis of a vast number of such rules which the Judges established and which they called "presumptions"—rules relating to the manner of proving cases and in this sense having to do with the law of evidence ; fixing, for example, when sufficient evidence was introduced, or when a party must introduce further evidence if he would win his case —McKelvey's Laws of Evidence, p. 80.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

Evidence may be given of facts in issue and relevant facts.

5. Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the existence or non existence of every fact in issue and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others.

Explanation —This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure.

(b) A suitor does not bring with him, and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case, a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Scope of the Law of Evidence—"The question, therefore, of what propositions may evidence be offered is not answered by the law of evidence, except in a subordinate way. The answer to it is made in four parts. Evidence may be offered of such propositions of fact as (a) Are material by the substantive law to any right or duty, claim or defence ; (b) Are issuable in the case at bar by the terms of the pleadings under the rules of pleadings ; (c) Are effective to relieve a party from the establishment of one of the preceding propositions ; (d) Are admissible by the law of evidence as evidentiary facts and thus may become in turn propositions to be proved. The first and the second of these classes clearly do not involve the law of evidence. The third class is concerned with judicial admissions and their congeners ; such are really equivalent to a pleading, because they formally waive proof ; they are therefore no part of the law of evidence except for the necessity of distinguishing them from other things miscalled admissions The fourth class alone concerns intrinsically with the law of evidence." Wigmore Cas., 3 Thus the law of evidence relates to the use of evidence before judicial tribunal, and in its proper significance, consists of (a) certain rules as to the exclusion of evidence, and (b) the rules which prescribe the manner of presenting evidence in the Courts.—McKelvy's Law of Evidence, p. 6.

What facts may be presented as evidence—Evidence can only be given of facts in issue or relevant facts. What are facts in issue are ascertained by the substantive law and the law of procedure What facts are relevant or admissible in evidence is answered by the law of evidence. This chapter contains the law of relevancy There is still a further restriction Evidence the production of which is barred by some provisions of Civil Procedure is not admitted in evidence even if they be relevant. This restriction is put by the explanation at the end of the section.

Legal relevancy.—The testimony offered must be logically probative of the matter to be proved, and if it is, it is legally relevant While this proposition, of course, includes direct evidence, it does not exclude, as irrelevant, evidence of facts not directly in issue but which create a presumption of the fact in issue. The qualification to the general rule is that it does not always follow merely because a fact is logically relevant, that it is always relevant. Certain evidence though not logically Incompetent, may be excluded on the ground of its unimportance, when compared with an abundance of better evidence easily available; on the ground that it has so slight or remote a bearing on the case either in point of time or value, that it would be unjust and unreasonable to prolong and complicate a trial by its investigation; on the ground of public policy. (Bur Jones § 135) In this connection it must be borne in mind that the whole law of evidence has evolved from trial by jury system. "Legal relevancy, which is esential to admissible evidence, requires a higher standard of evidentiary force. It includes logical relevancy, and for reasons of practical convenience, demands a close connection between the facts to be proved and the fact offered to prove it. All evidence must be logically relevant; that is absolutely essential. The fact however, that it is logically relevant does not ensure admissibility. It must also be legally relevant. A fact which in connection with other facts, renders probable the existence of a fact in issue may still be rejected, if, in the opinion of the Judge and under the circumstances of the case it is considered essentially misleading or too remote."—Best Evidence (Camb. § 251.) Stephen defines the word 'relevant" as meaning "that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other, that according to the common course of events one either renders probable the past, present or future existence or non-existence of the other. Stephen's Dig. Ev. This is a definition of logical relevancy. Logical relevancy plays a certain important part in the law of evidence, in that no evidence is admissible unless it is relevant. It does not follow that all evidence which is logically relevant is admissible and in fact much that is logically relevant is excluded Certain rules are laid down, founded on various considerations, by which many matters which are logically relevant are declared inadmissible Legal relevancy is not different in its nature from logical relevancy. The only distinction is in its field of application. Legal relevancy is the attribute of all those logically relevant matters which are not declared inadmissible by one or more of the excluding rules. Stephen proceeds upon the theory that logical relevancy is the main condition of admissibility, and that all rules excluding evidence which is logically relevant are, therefore, exceptions to the ... st have distinguished between logical and ... ly to all those facts which are not excluded ... But if what is legally relevant can only ... od, it is of little use to retain the term. In general, it may be said, that what is logically relevant is admissible, unless it comes within the terms of one or more of the rules of exclusion. McKelvy's Law of Evidence, p. 166; see also 1914 M. W. N. 931.

6. Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different times and places.

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction

(a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or the by-standers at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is a relevant fact.

(b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked, and goals are broken open. The occurrence of these facts is relevant, as forming part of the general ... them.

(d) The question is, whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact.

Scope.—All facts which are parts of the same transaction are relevant to each other, so that when one of such facts is in issue, the others are admissible. Such facts which are thus parts of the transaction in issue, are generally known as "res gestae" (R. v. Ellis, 6 B E C. 145). This rule as to "res gestae" is one of the clearest illustrations that they are all parts of the san ll parts of the same transaction, . hat if any of them be in issue the others are admissible as relevant facts The real and very substantial difficulty is to determine the limits of the transaction, and what facts are really part of it (Cockle Cas. 64) Principles of the sections relating to relevancy of facts are mere rules of logic. It is when they comprise statements, exclamations, answers to questions and other verbal utterances by the participants, in the act or event, that they occupy the attention of the Courts If it had been possible to treat verbal utterances made under such conditions purely as acts, and not in any sense as evidence of the things stated, the subject of res gestae would not have belonged under the head of exceptions to the hearsay The ground of reliability upon which such declarations are received is their spontaneity. They are the Transaction—A transaction is a group of facts connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name, as a crime, contract, a wrong or any other subject of inquiry which may be in issue. Every fact which is part of the same transaction as the fact in issue is deemed to be relevant to the facts in issue, although if it may not be actually in issue, and although if it were not part of the same transaction, it might be excluded as heresay. Whether any particular fact is or not part of the same transaction as the facts in issue is a question of law upon which no principle has been stated by authority and on which single judges have given different decisions (Stephen's Digest. art. 3). See also 11 C W. Such words are admissible in evidence as part of the transaction (Thompson v. Trevanion. Skinner, 402 cited in Cockle Cas. 65). See also 34 P. R. 1914 Cr.=27 Ind. Cas. 664=16 Cr. L. J. 184

Verbal Act or Verbal parts of an Act—There are other declarations which are admitted as original evidence, being distinguished from heresay by their connection with the principal fact under investigation. The affairs of men consist of a complication of circumstances so intimately interwoven as to be hardly separable from each other Each owes its birth to some preceding circumstances so intimately interwoven as to be hardly separable from each other. Each owes its birth to some preceding circumstances, and, in its turn, become the prolific parents of others; and each during its existence has its inseparable attributes; and its kindred facts, materially affecting its character, and essential to be known in order to a right understanding of its nature. These surrounding circumstances, constituting parts of the res gestae may always be shown to the Court, along with the principal fact, and their admissibility is determined according to the degree of their relation to that fact, and in the exercise of the Court's sound discretion; it being extremely difficult, if not impossible, to bring this class of cases within the limits of a more particular description. The principal points for considerations are whether the circumstances and declarations offered in proof were contemporaneous with the main fact under consideration, its character. Greenleaf;

Declarations.—A statement, in order to be admissible in evidence as part of the transaction or res gestae, must strictly accompany, or be made at the same time as the physical acts in question. R. v. Bedingfield. 14 Cox. C. C. 341. But in R. v. Foster, 6 C & P. 325, a statement, which followed the physical act, was admitted in evidence as a part of the transaction, although it was the last item of the transaction. A statement made by a third party may be relevant as part of the transaction, if he be actully present at the time. (R. v Fowkes Stephen 4). "There is a principle in the law of evidence which is known as res gestae; that is, the declarations of an individual made at the moment of a particular occurrence, when the circumstances are such that we may assume that his mind is controlled by the event, may be received in evidence because they are supposed to be expressions involuntarily forced out of him by the particular event, and thus have an element of truthfulness they might otherwise not have.........But you are not to give any more weight to a declaration thus made, or any weight at all unless you are satisfied that it was made at a time when it was forced out as the utterance of a truth, forced out against his will, or without his will, and at a period of time so closely connected with the transaction that there has been no opportunity for subsequent reflection or deter-

Facts which are the occasion, cause or effect of facts in issue.

7. Facts which are the occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, of relevant facts, or facts in issue, or which constitute the state of things under which they happened, or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, shortly before the robbery, B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons, are relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A murdered B.

Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts.

(c) The question is, whether A poisoned B.

The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison, and habits of B, known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison, are relevant facts.

Scope.—This section admits a very large class of connected facts in addition to those admitted by the last section. Here it should again be observed that the weight to be attached to such facts when admitted must, of necessity, vary. An effect may be conclusive proof of the primary act having been done, e. g. the birth of a child. On the other hand the existence of an opportunity may go but a very short way towards proving the committal of an act by a specified person since the same opportunity may have laid open to many others (Field, Ev 20). Every fact is connected with numberless other facts by ties more or less close. It may often be difficult for a judge to say whether a fact can or cannot be properly said to "form part of a transaction" within the meaning of section 6. This section meets this difficulty by embracing a larger area of facts leaving the transaction itself, it provides for the admission of several classes of facts, which though not, possibly, forming part of the transaction, are yet connected with it in particular modes, and so are relevant when the transaction itself is under enquiry. These modes of connection are (1) as being the occasion or cause of a fact; (2) as being its effect; (3), as giving opportunity for its occurrence; (4), as constituting the state of things under which it happened. They are in truth different aspects of causation (Cun Ev 91).

Principle.—"The competency of collateral fact to be used as the basis of legitimate argument is not to be determined by the conclusiveness of the inferences, it may afford in reference to the litigated fact. It is enough if these may tend, even in a slight degree to elucidate the enquiry or to assist, though remotely, to a determination probably founded on truth." Holmes v. Goldsmith, 147 U. S. 150, 164.

Occasion, Cause and Effect.—These are different aspects of causation. If they are parts of the same transaction, they are admissible under s. 6, and also the parties with the jury and encourage attacks without notice. The maxim "Res inter alios actae alteri nocere non debent" is frequently supposed to express the principle of or similar transaction inter partes e principle of the maxim appears as examination of this chapter ared relevant are res inter alios arts. The maxim has its principal Ev. 125, 126). But where there is some logical connection between the fact offered as evidence and the issuable fact, or where proof of the former tends to make the latter more probable or improbable the testimony proposed is relevant, if not too remote (Bur Jones, Ev. s. 138.). So the admissibility of a similar fact as direct proof of the fact in issue depends, not on personal, but logical privity; and is mainly a question of degree, or of our knowledge and understanding of the causes of events, as to which in many cases, the progress of science may change the law. In proportion as the element of personality, the interjection of the free will of the human being diminishes, we become more certain of the effects of a causative force, and more ready to admit such evidence. (Phip. Ev. 126). On this principle this section lays down that those facts which are the occasion, cause and effect of relevant facts or facts in issue are admissible in evidence.

Opportunity.—Opportunity must always be relevant; for no circumstances can be more inforn committing the crin on alibi. But the a case cited by Best from Starkie in which a murdered her mistress. No persons were prisoner and the doors and windows were closed and secure as usual. The prisoner was condemned and executed chiefly on the presumption that no one else could have had access to the house; but it afterwards appeared by the confession of one of the real murderers, that they had gained admittance into the house, which was situated in a narrow street by means of board across the street from an upper window of an opposite house, to an lived, and that having committed no traces behind them. (Norton, sition of the parties whose conduct is in question are generally relevant to such conduct. So evidence of opportunity is relevant to the question whether a certain act was done. Circumstantial evidence is admissible not only in the absence of direct evidence, but also in aid of direct evidence. Dowling v Dowling, 10 Irish C. L. R. 236.

Illustrations.—Illustration (a) is an instance of facts relevant as giving occasion or opportunity; (b) of facts constituting an effect; (c) of facts constituting the state of things under which an alleged fact happened. (Cunningham, 91).

Motive, preparation and previous or subsequent conduct

8. Any fact is relevant which shows or constitutes a motive or preparation for any fact in issue or relevant fact.

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding, or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto, and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding, is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous or subsequent thereto.

Explanation 1.—The word "conduct" in this section does not include statements, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements; but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of this Act.

Explanation 2.—When the conduct of any person is relevant, any statement made to him or in his presence and hearing, which affects such conduct, is relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant.

(b) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond.

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant.

(c) A is tried for the murder of B by poison.

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B, is relevant.

(d) The question is whether a certain document is the Will of A.

The facts, that not long before the date of the alleged Will A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will, and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared of which he did not approve, are relevant (e) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, either before or at the time of, or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence, which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself, or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned persons to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant (f) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence—"the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B," and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant.

(g) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing—"I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees," and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts

(h) The question is, whether A committed a crime

The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter, are relevant.

(i) A is accused of a crime

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant (j) The question is, whether A was ravished.

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1) or as corroborative evidence under section 157.

(k) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that he said he had been robbed without making any complaint, is not relevant, as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or as a corroborative evidence under section 157.

Scope —This section further illustrates the principle laid down in the preceding section. Under certain circumstances collateral facts are admissible when they fall within the definition of this section. The same principle underlies the admission of these facts. So familiar is the practice of proving, as parts of the claim of evidence the preparation, motive, desire or intention of the party to do the act in question. On the same principle it is relevant to prove misconduct of the party in respect to the pending case, such as attempting to suppress or to fabricate testimony or bribe witnesses or jurors ; and so it is relevant to prove the demeanour of a party accused of a crime or tort, his flight or concealment and his falsehoods, his attempt to fasten the crime on others, his possession of property connecting him with the offence, or statements made in his presence likely to affect his conduct. So whenever any act may be proved, statements accompanying and explaining that act made by or to the person doing it may be proved if they are necessary to understand it. In criminal cases (of rape) the conduct of the person against whom the offence is said to have been committed, and in particular the fact that (she made a complaint soon after the offence to persons to whom she would naturally complain, are deemed to be relevant. But the terms of the complaint itself seem to be deemed to be irrelevant. When a person's conduct is in issue or is, or is deemed to be, relevant to the issue, statements made in his presence and hearing by which his conduct is likely to have [illegible]

[illegible] ted with the facts in issue are said to be "relevant facts," and they constitute what is known as "circumstantial evidence." Thus facts which supply a motive for an act, or constitute preparation for it, or conduct apparently Influenced by the act, are relevant to the question whether such an act was done by the person concerning whom such motive, preparation or conduct is proved (R. v. Palmer, Cockle Cas 38). Lord Campbell in that case observed : "With respect to the alleged motive, it is of great importance to see whether there was a motive for committing such a crime, or whether there was not, or whether there was an improbability of its having been committed so strong as not to be overpowered by positive evidence. But, gentlemen, if there be any motive which can be assigned, I am bound to tell you that the adequacy of that motive is of little importance. We know from experience of Criminal Courts that atrocious crimes of this sort have been committed from very slight motives ; not merely from malice or revenge, but to gain small pecuniary advantage, or to drive off for a time passing difficulties."

Case—The first information report against the accused is admissible under this section. 44 C. L. J. 253.

Motive—A motive is that which moves a man to do a particular act. It is that which is in his mind and which moves him to act and whether the belief which produces that state of mind is true or false the motive remains the same and the truth or falsity of the belief is not really in question. 62 Ind. Cas. 545. Intention must not be confounded with motive Intention shows the nature of the act which the man believes he is doing. Motive is the reason which induces him to do the act which he intends to do and does Motive is sometimes very important as evidencing a state of mind, which is a material element in the offence charged. (Mayne's Cr. Law & 9 A) See also 40 P. R. 1905 Cr.=148 P. L. R. 1905 ; 7 Ind. Cas. 38 ; 91 P. R. 1866 Cr. ; 7 W. R. 60 ; 15 W. R. 45 ; 5 W. R. 28 ; 1 W. R. 19. In the proof of certain crimes, where motive is an important element, evidence of motive will involve the placing before the jury of a plan or scheme carried out or attempted by the accused, which may include the commission of other crimes Mckelvey's Evidence, p. 190 In Com. v. Robinson, (1888) 146 Mass. 571=16 N. E. 452, X [illegible] of a scheme by X to kill Y, then [illegible] under which Y had been benefici[illegible] Allen J. observed : "In such cases there is a distinct and significant probative effect resulting from the continuance of the same plan or scheme, and from the doing of other acts in pursuance thereof It is somewhat of the nature of threats, or declarations of intention, but more specially of the preparations for the commission of the crime which is subject of the indictments." Motive for a crime, while it is always a satisfactory circumstance of corroboration when there is convincing evidence to prove the guilt of an accused person, can never supply the want of reliable evidence, direct or circumstantial of the commission of the crime with which he is charged. 94 Ind. Cas. 90= A. I. Facts necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts

9. Facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which support or rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which established the identity of any thing or person whose identity is relevant, or fix the time or place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact happened, or which show the relation of parties by whom any such fact was transacted, are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether a given document is the Will of A.

The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts.

(b) A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B.

(c) A is accused of a crime.

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house, is relevant under section 8, as conduct subsequent to and affected by facts in issue.

The fact that at the time when he left home he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went, is relevant, as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly.

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant, except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent

(d) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A C, on leaving A's service says to A—"I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer." This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct, which is relevant as a fact in issue.

(e) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says as he delivers it—"A says you are to hide this." B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(f) A is tried for a riot and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob The cries of the mob are relevant as explanatory of the nature of the transaction.

[illegible] duct of an action, to [illegible] for some introductory [illegible] ry desires to know the [illegible] Those circumstances [illegible] but in connection with the main issue to be put before the tribunal they are treated as the introduction to main matters or by way of inducement to it. They take the place of the preamble to a statute, which while it has no power in itself, combined with the enacting clauses becomes the statute. The variety of these introductory or preliminary proofs as great in number as the variety of the causes of action, prevents any attempt at classification, but the rule as to their relevancy is abundantly established in view of these facts the preliminary questions leading to the introduction of relevant fact was held entirely proper. It follows that if introductory testimony, not inherently relevant, is admissible a fortiori that should be relevant, which will explain, illustrate and elucidate evidence already given. Indeed, it is now an every-day occurrence for such evidence to be received as relevant—evidence which, if considered abstractly

o nothing, but taken in connection xplain and illustrate them, either by or breaking the force of that given by the other by showing its misapplication, exaggeration or other reason for depreciation of its force or value Thus an explanation of words used in a conversation, the demonstration of the use of a scientific instrument, testimony showing the conduct of a party bears a different construction from that he would have put upon it, a conversation which would otherwise be hearsay, are examples of the class of evidence referred to. Burr Jones Ev. § 137 (a) and § 137 (b).

Explanation of facts.—If after the commission of a crime a person, whose name is mentioned as a participator in the crime, absconds, his conduct shows that he is indeed concerned in the crime. Therefore anything which tends to explain his conduct and furnishes a motive other than a guilty conscience is relevant under this section. Gangaram v Imperator, 62 Ind. Cas. 545=22 Bom. L. 10. Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design.

Illustrations.

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

Principle.—A rule is well established that, in cases where conspiracy is charged, the admission of one of the accused may become, by reason of the other proof in the case, admissible against the other. By themselves, and without other proof, they are not admissible ; but, if proof shows the existence of the conspiracy, statements as to details of the crime charged, made by one party, become admissible against the other. The effect of this rule may be illustrated by supposing that the fact of the proof, but the fact of proved. To procure a

. Suppose now, that the only proof of the former fact consisted of statements in respect to it made by one of the parties. It is clear that since both are shown to have been interested together, and to have set out to commit the act the statements made by one as to what was done should be received against the other. It must be borne in mind, however, that the fact of the conspiracy is to be proved by evidence entirely outside the admission. It is probable that, in all cases of conspiracy where admissions are received, their reception could be explained on the ground that they are a part of the res gestae.—McKelvey's Law of Evidence, p. 144. Section 10 is based on the principle of agency. A. I. R 1932 Bom. 56=33 Bom L. R. 1159

Scope.—The operation of this section is strictly conditional upon there being a reference to the carrying out of the conspiracy. 38 C 169=15 C. W. N 25 ; 28 C. 797 A conspiracy within the terms of this section contemplates something more than the joint act of two or more persons to commit an offence. 4 C. W. N. 528. This section says that reasonable ground for belief in the existence of a conspiracy should be shown before evidence is given of the acts of persons, who but for such conspiracy, ed under this section to make documents found in the possession of one of several persons accused of conspiracy admissible against other accused, is, that there is reasonable ground to believe in the existence of a conspiracy amongst such persons. It is not necessary for this purpose to establish by independent evidence that they were conspirators. 16 C. W. N. 1105 ; 30 C 983. See also 25 B. 230 ; 9 B. L. R. App 36 ; 7 B L. But the statement of an accused after arrest is not admissible under the section 46 C. 700. This section is wider than the English law on the subject which requires that acts and declarations of other conspirators must be in furtherance of the common purpose. Nor a conspirator who has severed his connection with the conspiracy is liable for the acts or declarations of the conspirators after such severance. (Phipson, 74).

Actionable wrong.—The acts and declarations of co-trespassers in civil actions and indeed of all persons combined for a common object whether civil or criminal are governed by the same rule The acts and declarations of joint tortfeasors are not however reciprocally admissible unless combinations for a common object be proved. (Phipson, 64) In civil actions the declarations of co-trespassers are subject to the same rule. If they are mere narratives, they are evidence only against the makers ; if they form part of the res gestae they are evidence against all. This section applies to an "actionable wrong" as well as a criminal offence. (Norton, 123).

Facts showing existence of state of mind, or of body or bodily feeling.

14. Facts showing the existence of any state of mind, such as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant.

Explanation* 1.—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists, not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

Explanation* 2.—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact.†

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person, is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person.

The fact of previous publcations by A respecting B, showing ill-will on the part of A towards B, is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question.

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was, is relevant, as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found.

The fact A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property and wished to set up a false claim to it, is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith.

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant.

The fact that he said some thing indicating an intention to commit that particular crime is relevant.

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class is irrelevant.

This cannot be with the object of inducing the jury to infer, that because the accused has committed a crime of a similar description on other occasions, he is guilty on the present ; but to anticipate the defence that he acted innocently, and without any guilty knowledge, or that he had no intention or motive to commit the act. For the purpose, therefore, of proving the intent, not of proving the act itself, it is often permissible to show other criminal transactions of the same sort springing from the like mental condition (Burr Jones s. 143). "It is, that though the prisoner is not to be prejudiced in the eyes of the jury by the needless admission of testimony tending to prove another crime, yet whenever the evidence which tends to prove the other crime tends also to prove this one, not merely showing the prisoner to be a bad man, but by showing the ... when he did the act ... it really tends to this, ... Scope.—There is no presumption that the course of business in a private office has the regularity of that in a public department. But the existence of any course of business, according to which an act in question would have been done, is relevant to the question whether such act was in fact done. Hetherington v Kemp, 16 R. Registered letter.—Where a registered letter is posted to a firm's correct address but is returned with the word 'refused' endorsed upon it, the presumption under this section in favour of the existence of common course of business is that the letter reached the place of firm's business and it may also be presumed that it was refused by an agent or partner of the firm. 50 Ind. ADMISSIONS.

17. An admission is a statement, oral or documentary, which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons, and under the circumstances, hereinafter mentioned.

Admission defined.

Admission.—An admission is "a statement oral or written, suggesting any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant or deemed to be relevant to any such fact, made by or on behalf of any party to any proceedings" (Reynold's Step. Ev. art. 15) Admissions have been sub-divided into direct and indirect, express, implied, incidental, judicial and extra-judicial, and the names of some of them sufficiently indicate the description of any particular admission to obviate special definition. Direct and express admissions are practically the same Implied admissions are made by having done or omitted to do some act. The term "incidental" carries with it that the admissions were not made in connection with the matter under judicial inquiry. So judicial admissions are such as may be made in pleadings or in the progress of a trial or generally in the course of judicial proceeding, and all admissions not so made may be grouped as extra-judicial admissions. Burr Jones s 235. Silence or conduct may amount to an admission, when it is natural to expect a reply or statement. (Bessela v Stern, L R 2 P. D. 265). A vague admission is no admission. 21 A. L. J 869. Entire statement in admission must be considered together. Particular statement cannot be selected. 141 Ind. Cas 264=34 P L. R. 149=14 Lah 218=A. I. R. 1933 Lah. 179. Erroneous admission may be withdrawn. A. I. R. 1931 Lah. 6=32 P. L. R. 413. An admission is presumed to be true. 38 C. W. N. 861.

Convictions previous to the time specified in the charge, or previous to the framing of the charge are relevant under this explanation. But subsequent convictions are not admissible. 1 C. W. N. 146.

15. When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional, [or done with a particular knowledge or intention],* the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant.

Facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional.

The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.

Legislative changes.—The words in the brackets have been inserted by Act 3 of 1891.

Scope—This section is an application of the general rule laid down in s. 14, and it is not necessary under the section that all the acts should form part of a series of similar occurrences; such acts may be proved. Where the particular transaction is one of a series of similar frauds, evidence of the other frauds is admissible to prove the intention of the accused in the particular case. 36 C. 573=13 C. W. N. 973=9 C. L. J. 610; see also A. I. R. 1933 Cal. 136=34 Cr. L. J. 294. In a prosecution for theft it cannot be assumed, as a matter of course ,that a previous conviction for the same offence is relevant in establishing the guilt of the accused. In order that it may be relevant under this section it must be strictly shown that the section applies. U. B R. (1897-1901) vol. 1, 144. See also 13 Cr. L. J. 125; 12 Cr. L. J. 611; 269 P. L. R. 1914; 25 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.; 47 C. 671; 60 Ind Cas. 331.

Principle.—"In criminal cases the leadi[illegible] matters which are irrelevant to the issue w[illegible] exception that evidence will be admitted of [illegible] throw light on the transaction in issue, as [illegible] course of conduct, or to show criminal intention or guilty knowledge in the mind of the accused or to rebut the defence that the [illegible] undesignedly"—Powell, p. 128. Passing bad coins—In cases of passing bad coins previous offence is relevant. R. v. Jarves, 7 Cox. 53.

Arson.—In cases of arson, evidence may be given of previous fires that the prisoner had experienced in his premises. R. v. Gray, 4 F. & F. 1102.

16. When there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business, according to which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact.

Had you called the porter, and he had said that although he had no recollection of the letter in question, he invariably carried to the post office all the letters found upon the table, this might have done, but I cannot hold this general evidence of the course of business in the plaintiff's counting house to be sufficient." In a private office the course of business is only a relevant fact. In a public office the Court will presume that the act was properly done. Admission and confession.—In English law admission is confined in civil cases and confessions in criminal cases. But in the Evidence Act such distinction has not been observed. Sections 17-22 are applicable both to civil and criminal cases. But confession is used only in relation to criminal cases and herein the Act followed the English law.

Statements made by parties to suits suing or sued in a representative character, are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character.

Statements made by—

by party interested in subject-matter.

(1) persons who have any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the proceeding, and who make the statement in their character of persons so interested, or by persons from whom interest derived.

(2) persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject matter of the suit, are admissions, if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements.

Scope—Let us confine ourselves to civil admission for the present. The persons by whom admission may be made are the parties to the suit or their agents, or those identified in interest with them; or the persons sub modo in (1) and (2). If they proceed from a stranger they are generally inadmissible; unless he be dead, as to which see section 32 post. An admission made by an infant after he arrives at age will bind him. No distinction should be drawn between the nominal and real parties to a suit. The Courts of India being Courts of Equity should deal directly with admissions made by nominal parties, as, for instance, consignees suing in the name of consignors. When the Court considers the admission of such a party fraudulent it should be at once rejected (Norton, Ev. 143).

Cases—A statement made by defendant in another suit may be used as an admission within the meaning of this section. 22 W. R. 203. An admission against her own interest by the predecessor-in-title of the defendant is relevant under ss. 18 and 21, though not conclusive, and is sufficient by itself to shift the burden of proof. 7 N. (1) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under section 32.

(2) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body, relevant or in issue, made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable.

Why admissions competent.—"Whatever a party voluntarily admits to be true, though the admission be contrary to his interest may reasonably be taken for truth are properly dispensed with, they are inapplicable An oath is administered to a witness in order to impose an additional obligation o i his conscience and so to add weight to his testimony, and he is cross-examined to ascertain his means of knowledge, as well as his intention to speak the truth But where a man voluntarily admits a debt or confesses a crime, there is little occasion for confirmation ; the ordinary motives of human conduct are sufficien warrants for belief" Southern Ins. Do v. White, 58 Ark 277. In English law such admissions are admissible as one of the exceptio is to the hearsay evidence Strictly speaking they are open to but few of the objections which may be urged against hearsay testimony. Admission made by a party is of considerable weight as evidence against him, and may, if unexplained, be even decisive. 51 Ind. Cas 876 ; 13 C. W. N. 409 ; 7 Ind. Cas 505. Confession caused by inducement, threat or promise, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding.

24. A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable, for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him.

Confessions—The word 'confession' as used in the sections of the Evidence Act relating to confessions, should not be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt. 7 A. 646=A. W. N. 1885, 131. A confession may be defined as "an admission made at any time by a person charged with an offence, stating or suggesting the inference that he committed the offence." 16 P. R. 1886 Cr.; 51 P. L. R. 1905 Cr. An incriminating statement, which falls short of absolute confession, but from which the inference of guilt follows, is a 'confession'. 51 P. L R. 1905 Cr; 6 C. 509, (F. R); 14 B. 260 (F. B). It is admissible even when it is not sworn. 3 P. R. 1880 Cr.; see also 13 Ind. Cas 96.

To be taken with caution—A judge, who is to decide whether a confession is admissible in evidence or should be rejected, should exercise necessary all caution and vigilance, before admitting as voluntary, any confession tendered in evidence. I B. R. (1893-1900), 145; 31 P R. 1867 Cr.; 47 P. R. 1866 Cr.

Must be taken as a whole—The confession must be taken as a whole. 15 B 452. When confession contains extenuating as well as incriminating matter, the extenuating portion must be taken into consideration no less than the incriminating portion, except when there is evidence to contradict it. 4 P. R. 1872 Cr.; A. W. N. 1883, 148.

Scope.—In criminal cases a confession made by the prisoner can be given in evidence against him, if the prosecution show it was free and voluntary not otherwise. It will be held not to be free and voluntary if it were induced by any threat or promise made by a person in authority. Any expressions suggesting that it would be "better" for the prisoner to tell the truth import a threat or promise ment might cause the accused to make an untrue confession. (Powell, Ev. 150). See also U. B. R. (1897-1901) vol. I. 147.

Inducement—An inducement need not be expressed; it may be implied. R. v. Gilles, 11 Cox. 69. When the inducement comes from the police constable, even there it is inadmissible. L B. R (1872-1892), 396. See also 221 P. L. R. 1911; I. L. B. R. 168; Rat. Un. Cr. C. 952; U. B R. (1872-1901) vol. I. 192; 75 Ind. Cas. 152.

Person in authority.—The term includes the prosecutor, officers of justice and other persons directly connected with the prosecution only. R. v. Gibbons, 1 C. and P. 97) The following have been held to be "person in authority"—magistrates, even those not acting as such in the case, their clerks, coroners, police constables, warders and others having custody, of the prisoner, seachers, prosecutors and their wives and attorneys Masters and mistresses are only so considered if they are the mselves prosecuting, or the charge is connected with the employment. (Cockle Case. 189) See also 2 L. B. R. 316. A panchayat is a person in authority. 11 C. W. N. 904, contra, 4 Bom L. R. 785 The headman of village is a person in authority. 26 Ind. Cas 129.

Having reference to the charge against the accused—The offer of some merely collateral convenience, or temporal advantage unconnected with the result of the prosecution, or an appeal to a man's moral feelings is not such an inducement as will render a confession inadmissible The promise, or words, to have such effect, must have reference to the result of the prosecution suggesting a more favourable determination of the proceedings. R v. Lloyd, 6 C. & P 393.

Temporal nature—The "threat or promise" must offer some temporal advantage or disadvantages connected with the result of the prosecution in order to render a confession involuntary. Exhortations to confess on moral or religious grounds are not sufficient to exclude a confession. (R. v Jarvis, L. R 1. C C. R 96 ; Cockle Cas. 186).

Scope—This section is also an exception to the hearsay evidence. Secondary evidence of any oral statement is called hearsay. The repetition by a witness of that which he was told by some one else who is called as a witness is a hearsay, and is therefore, as a general rule, inadmissible. The reasons for this rule are obvious. We can generally trust a witness who states something which he himself has either seen or heard ; but when he tells us something which he has heard from another person, his statement is obviously less reliable and satisfactory. A multitude of probable contingencies diminish its value The witness may have misunderstood or imperfectly remembered, or even may be wilfully misrepresenting the words of the third person ; or the lattter may have spoken hastily, inaccurately or even falsely. Moreover the person who is really responsible for the statement did not make in on oath ; he was not cross-examined upon it, and the Court had no opportunity of obsserving his demeanour when he made it. It is a fundamental principle of our law that evidence has no claim to credibility, unless it be given on oath or what is equivalent to an oath, and unless the party to be affected by it has an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. (Powell, Ev. 305). There are various Q B 4 ; Mercer v. Dunne 1904 ; 2 Ch. 534 Persons whose statements are receivable in evidence as declarations must be shown to have been "competent declarants" that is, they must have been so situated as to the place in questions, residence, duty or other connection that it may be concluded they had both the means and the motive for giving a true account of the matter (Newcastle v. Broxtowe, 4 B. & Ad. 237 ; Cockle Cas. 219). But this clause is not applicable to a case where the evidence is required to prove a fact in issue, and not mearly a relevant fact. 15 B. 565.

Clause (5)—According to English law, the statements verbal or written, and conduct of deceased persons, who were related by blood or marriage with a family in question, if made "ante litem motam," are admissible to prove relationship, or family succession, or facts upon which such matters depend, such as births, marriages and deaths. (Vide Cockle Cas. 202 ; Berkely Peerage Case, 4 Campbell 401). A controversy in a family, though not at that moment the subject of a law suit, is sufficient to exclude evidence of declarations as to pedigree made at the time of such controversy on the ground that they were not made "ante litem motam". (Butler v. Mountgarrett, 7 H. L. Cas. 633 ; Cockle Cas. 206). In a case where there is no question of relationship, no question of descent, no question of predigree, none as to the position of any person in any family, such evidence is not admissible. Harris v. Guthrie, L. R. 13 Q. B. D. 818. According to English law statements made by servants or intimate acquaintances, whatever their position or knowledge may be, are not admissible. Johnson v. Lenson, 9 Moore. 183 ; Cockle Cas. 209. But therein the Indian Legislators departed also from the English law and laid down that statement of persons having special means of knowledge would be relevant. So a statement as to the age of member of a family made by another member is no doubt admissible after the latter's death under this clause. 25 M. 183. But special means of knowledge should be shown. 10 Ind. Cas. 199. The statement in a pedigree made by a deceased member of one branch of a family, regarding the descendants of another branch thereof, before any dispute arose as to the latter, is relevant and admissible in evidence. 32 C. 6. But this clause does not cover statements of facts made by interested parties in denial, in the course of litigation of pedigrees set up by the opposite parties. 9 A. 467. Clause (7).—A deed of mortgage containing an assertion of title as owner by the mortgagor is relevant under s. 13 as evidence of the title asserted. Where the mortgagor is dead, the recitals in the deed as to how he got the title are also evidence under this clause as statements made by deceased person in a document relating to transaction mentioned in s 13. 1921 M. W. N. 560.

Clause (8)—The meaning of this clause is that where a number of persons assemble together to give vent to a common statement expressing the feelings or impressions made in their minds at the time of making it, that statement may be repeated by the witness and is evidence. 23 W. R. 36 C. R.

Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding the truth of facts therein stated.

33. Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding, or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, when the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable :

Provided—that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest ; that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine ;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding

Explanation—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section.

Scope.—It has long been settled as one of the exceptions to the general rule excluding hearsay that the testimony of a witness given in a former action or at a former stage of the same action is competent in a subsequent action or in a subsequent proceeding in the same action, where it is shown that the witness is dead or that a valid legal reason exists for his non-production, that the parties and questions in issue are substantially the same, and that such former testimony can be substantially reproduced upon the second hearing. (Burr Jones §336).

Parties—The rule is that such evidence is proper, not only when the point in [illegible] me parties, but also for or [illegible] lood, privies in state or pri- [illegible] ejected, although there were [illegible] when the issues are sub- [illegible] ond suit had the opportunity [illegible] be substantially the same, [illegible] ish this. Criminal cases—The application of this section in criminal cases ought to be confined within the narrowest limits 17 Bom. L. R. 570. See also 18 Bom. L. R. 214 ; 25 O. C. 142 ; 2 A. 696 ; L. B. R. (1872-1892) 134 ; 3 B. 334 ; Rat. Un. Cr. C.

How much of a Statement is to be proved.

39. When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, book or series of letters of papers as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.

What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, book or series of letters or papers.

Principal—If a part of the conversation or transaction has been given in direct testimony, the remainder, so far as it is relevant, may be called out by the cross-examination, as the inquiry and answer in such case may tend to impeach, rebut, explain or qualify the testimony already given.

"The plea of res judicata applies except in special cases, not only to points upon which the Court was actually required by the parties to form an opinion and pronounce a judgment, but to every point which properly belonged to the subject of litigation, and which the parties exercising reasonable diligence might have brought forward at the time " Henderson v Henderson, 3 Hare, 115

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc, jurisdiction

41. A final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation ; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment (order or decree) declares it to have accrued to that person ; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, (order or decree) declared that it had ceased or should cease , and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, (order or decree) declares that it had been or should be his property.

Legislative changes.—The words within brackets have been inserted by Act 18 of 1872.

Scope—These are judgments in rem. They are conclusive on every body, and as such admissible against every body. Such adjudication, being the solemn delaration of the properly accredited Court, which has the best right so to adjudicate, concludes not merely the parties to the action and their privies, but all persons, from asserting the contrary (Powell, Ev 66.). Such judgments are conclusive "not merely as to the point actually decided, but as to a matter which it was necessary to decide and which was actually decided as the groundwork of the [illegible] at issue." Per Coleridge, J in R. [illegible] ust clearly appear that a decision [illegible] lgment Concha v Concha, 11 App. Cas 511 Ballantyne v Mackinn, 1896 2 Q B. 455. Scope.—"Having now disposed of judgments which render the matter res judicata between the parties, judgments which from their special character are conclusive all the world, and judgments which as relating to matters of a public nature, are relevant though not conclusive, between strangers to the suit, we come to the general rule of exclusion viz that all other judgments are irrelevant. To this rule however, there is a highly important limitation. A judgment, though inadmissible for proving the truth of what it asserts, may be valuable as evidence for some other purpose. Its very existence may be a fact in issue, and then of course, evidence of it may be given ; or it may be a fact relevant within some one of the classes of relevant facts given in the Act, and then again, evidence of it can be given." 44 Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.

Judgments in rem—Having regard to the wide terms of this section it is possible to say that it is not open to a Court other than the Court from which a grant has been issued in cases of fraud or collusion to deal with the matter and decide whether the grant has been obtained by fraud or collusion. But the better course in such cases would be when it is open to the party alleging fraud to apply to the Court from which the grant issued to stay the suit to enable an application to be made to revoke the grant. 25 C. Cases—To base a conviction on the evidence of an expert in hand-writing as a general rule, is very unsafe. There may be cases in which the hand-writing is of such a peculiar character that the conclusion as to the identity of the writer is irresistible 1 A L J. 184=9 Cr. L. J 498 ; 15 Ind. Cas 979. Comparison of hand-writing is permissible in criminal no less than in civil cases 2 Weir. 759. It is not right to assume that a Sub-Registrar is an expert in the matter of thumb-marks. 2 Weir 760 The evidence of an expert in hand-writing is inadmissible, if there is no comparison with proved or admitted hand-writing in open Court in the presence of the party affected 16 C W N. 812=14 Ind. Cas. 753=39 C. 606. The value of ordinary or non-expert oral evidence mainly rests on the credibility of the witness—his inclination and capacity for telling the truth ; the value of expert evidence rests on the skill of the winess—the extent of his competency for forming a reliable opinion. 3 N. Facts bearing upon opinions of experts.

46. Facts not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is whether A was poisoned by a certain poison.

The fact that other persons, who were poisoned by that poison, exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be the symptoms of that poison, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea-wall.

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects, but where there were no such sea-walls, began to be obstructed at about the same time, is relevant.

Scope—Facts not otherwise relevant, have in some cases been permitted to be proved as supporting or being inconsistent with the opinion of experts. (Step. Dig. art 50). Facts although otherwise irrelevant, may be given in evidence in corroboration, illustration or rebuttal of opinion So on cross examination he may be asked inter alia, whether he has not expressed opinions inconsistent with his present testimony and if he deny the fact it may be independently proved. (Phipson, Ev. 347).

Opinion as to handwriting when relevant.

47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written ldressed to that person, or when, purporting to be written by that

Illustration.

The question is whether a given letter is in the handwriting of A, a merchant in London.

B. is a merchant in Calcutta, who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file B's correspondence D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon.

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the hand writing of A are relevant, though neither B, C or D ever saw A write.

Scope—Handwriting may be proved not only by the person who saw the particular document signed, but also by any person acquainted in any manner with the handwriting of the person said to have signed the document in question e. g.

by (a) having seen him write at any time, (b) having received documents purporting to be in his handwriting, or (c) having, in the ordinary course of business, observed or dealt with documents purporting to be his handwriting. Doe v Suckermore, 7. L J. K. B. 33; Cockle's Cas. 327 "The only evidence of handwriting which is entitled to be called direct is the evidence of a witness who proves that he himself wrote or signed the document in question or that of a witness who proves that he saw the document signed or written. All other evidence of handwriting must rest in greater or less degree upon inferences drawn from the appearence of the writing in question or other circumstances" (Wills, Cir. Ev. 184). Disputed handwriting can be proved under ss 73, 47 and 45 Where Court finds signature true on comparison, expert evidence can be dispensed with. A. I R. 1932 Bom. 588=34 Bom. L. R. 1371. Handwriting cannot be proved by a person who has with him only one letter of the person whose handwriting is to be proved A I. R. 1934 Nag. 204=1934 Cr. C. 898.

Cases—A witness need not state in the first instance how he knew the handwriting, since it is the duty of the opposite party to explore on cross examination the sources of his knowledge, if he be dissatisfied with the testimony as it stands. It is permissible and may often be expedient that the matters referred to in the explanation should be elicited on the examination-in-chief. Yet, it is within the power of the presiding Judge and often may be expedient to permit the opposite advocate to intervene and cross-examine so that the Court may be in a position to come to a definite conclusion on adeqate materials as to the proof of the handwriting. 5 Bom L R. 663=28 B 58 The ordinary methods of proving handwriting are (i) by calling as a witness a person who wrote the document or saw it written, or who is qualified to express an opinion as to the handwriting by virtue of s 47; (ii) by a comparison of handwriting as provided in s 73; and (iii) by the admission of the person against whom the document is tendered. A comparison of handwriting is a mode of ascertaining the truth which ought to be used with very great caution 26 C. W N. 113. The opinions of those who have not carefully studied the art of caligraphy is not as a rule of very great utility. 64 Ind. Cas. 234.

Opinion as to existence of right or custom, when relevant.

48. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right, the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed, are relevant.

Explanation.—The expression "general custom or right" includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

Illustration.

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section.

Scope—By s 98, evidence may be given with reference to a document, to show the meaning of technical, local and provincial expressions, abbreviations and words used in a peculiar sense. For this purpose the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge on the subject would be the best evidence. (Cun. Ev 202). Section 32 clause (4) makes the statement of dead persons, as regards the existence of public right or custom or matters of public or general interest, relevant. These are all exceptions to the rule of rejection of opinion evidence. So the statements made by persons who are in a position to know of the existence of a custom or usage in their locality are admissible under this section. 26 C 184. A general custom or general right may be proved by evidence, under this section—by the opinions of person who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed; such opinions are relevant, but such opinions must be given by witnesses who gave evidence 1 L. B. R. 80. It is admissible evidence for a witness to give his opinion on the existence of a family custom. 23 A. 37 (P. C). See 10 C. W. N 730 P. C. 5 C. 744 P. C.; 23 C. 427; 12 C. W. N. 74 P. C; A. Opinion as to usages, tenets, etc. when relevant.

49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages and tenents of any body of men or family, the constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts or by particular classes of people, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon, are relevant facts

Cases—Where witnesses, members of a family, have special means of knowledge as to the usages of the family, their evidence will be relevant under this section so far as the existence of such usage is concerned. It is admissible evidence for a witness to give his opinion on the existence of a family custom, and to state as the grounds of that opinion information derived from deceased persons. But it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay, and not mere repetition of hearsay 10 M L J. 267 P. C =23 A. 37. Opinion on relationship when relevant.

50 When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact:

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act,* or in prosecutions under section 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code †

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A and B were married.
The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family, is relevant.

Scope—The scope of this section, leaving the exception out of consideration seems to be that the person himself is not to be called to state his own opinion; but that, when he is dead or cannot be called, his conduct may be proved by others. The section appears to afford an exceptional way of proving a relationship, but by no means to prevent any person from stating a fact of which he or she has special means of knowledge A husband or wife is not, therefore, precluded from proving his or her marriage 9 M 9=1 Weir 572 Under the proviso to this section, in proceedings of the kind therein specified, opinion relevant under this section is not by itself sufficient to prove marriage which must, in consequence be

CHARACTER WHEN RELEVANT.

In civil cases, character to prove conduct imputed irrelevant

52. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned in such as to render probable and improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

Principle—"The general character is not in issue The business of the Court is to try the case, and not the man ; and a very bad man may have a very righteous cause." (Thompson v. Church, 1 Rost. 312 ; Wig. Cas, 29).

Criticism.—"The accepted general rule is that evidence of the general character of parties to civil actions, where character is not a part of the issue, is inadmissible. The rule seems to be one of practical convenience, for the purpose of avoiding the confusion of issue. On principle, however, it would seem that there ought to be exceptions to this general rule. In as much as the general rule is not based upon any philosophical reason, but is merely one of convenience, it ought not to be applied to cases where justice to the defendant requires that the inconvenience, arising from a confusion of the issues should be disregarded, and he be permitted [illegible] er words that such [illegible] a charhcter to bring it [illegible] cases. Civil actions [illegible] this character ; for such cases, are not infrequently mere speculative and black-maling schemes. The consequences to the defendant of a verdict against him in such a case are most serious, for the issue as to him involves his fortune, his honour and his family, From the very nature of the charge it often happens that an innocent man can only meet the issue by a denial of the charge and proof of his previous good character. Ought a defendant in such a case to be deprived of the right to lay before the jury evidence of his previous good character, because it will tend to confuse the issue, while a defendant in a cause where the state charges him with a simple assault, involving no more serious consequences than the payment, perhaps of a fine of fiv- dollars, is accorded the absolute right to give such evidence—Per Start C. J. in Hein v Holdridge, (1900) 81 N. W. 522 ; see also 6 W. R. Cr. 62 ; 7 W. R. Cr. 7 ; 59 Ind Cas 560 ; 1 C. W. N. 146 ; 26 Ind. Cas. 545 ; 13 Ind. Cas. 102 ; 16 C. W. N. 69.

Scope—The character of the parties to civil action is generally irrelevant and inadmissible. Attorney General v Bowman, 2 B. and P. 532.

In criminal cases previous good character relevant.

53. In criminal proceedings the fact that the person accused is of a good character is relevant.

Principle—The accused in a criminal case can always give evidence of his good character. R. v. Rowton, 34 L. J. M. C. 57. A man's character is often of the utmost importance in explaining his conduct and judging of his innocence or criminality. Many acts, which standing alone, would be suspicious, are freed from all suspicion when we come to know the circumstances and character of the person by whom they are done. (Cunningham, Ev. 205) No importance can be attached to evidence of good character when the case against the accused is clear.

Evidence of character.—Evid[illegible] who may show by general evidence [illegible] have committed the offence which [illegible] part of his character which is impea[illegible] dence of his conduct on particular occasions. The proper form of the question is, "From your knowledge of the prisoner does he bear a good character for honest[illegible] humanity, etc." as the case may be. (Roscoe, Ev. 25).

54. In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Previous bad character not relevant, except in reply.

Explanation 1.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

Explanation 2.—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.

Legislative changes.—This section has been substituted by Act 3 of 1891.

Scope.—It is generally stated, that evidence of a prisoner's good character is nadmissible except in answer to e rule into two parts ? It seems ......r, good or bad, is always admissible at the prisoner's option whenever his good character is admitted his bad character is admissible. (Cockle's Cas. 112). "Evidence of character must, of course, be applicable to the particular nature of the charge; to prove for instance, that a party has borne a good character for humanity and kindness, can have no bearing in reference to a charge of dishonesty. The correct mode of inquiry is as to the general character of the accused" (Will's Circumstantial Ev. p. 226). Evidence of bad character should not be put before the jury. 15 W. R. Cr. 37; 7 W. R. Cr. 7; 8 W. R. Cr 11; 6 W. R Cr. 72; 2 B. H. Cr. 125; 5 C. B. R. 4; 15 P. R. 1888 Cr.; 5 Bom. L. R. 1034

Explanation 1—In all actions or proceedings in which a plaintiff's character, is actually in issue, as in actions for defamation, evidence of the plaintiff's character may be given. Scott v. Sampson, L. R. 8 Q B. D 91. In prosecution for rape, or assault to commit rape, or indecent assault evidence of the bad character of the prosecutrix may be given in defence, her character, under the circumstances, being considered to some extent, in issue. (R. v Clarke 2 Starkle 241; Cockle's Cas. 112). e accused is a fact in issue and as such evidence. See 11 C. W. N. 789. Upon to determine what punishment to award not only the nature and gravity of the offence committed, but also the character of the accused, the bad character character being admiss- eneral reputation and itation or disposition is this rule. Evidence of B. R.(1893-1900), 352.

Explanation 2.—It has been held that if prisoner's counsel elicited on cross-examination, from the witnesses for the prosecution that the prisoner has borne a good character, a previous conviction might be put in evidence against him, in like manner as if witness to his character had been called. Per Parke B, in R. v. Gadbury, 8 C. & P. 676; see also R. v. Srimton, 2 Den. C. C. R. 319=21 L. J. M. C. 37. Where a man is being tried upon a specific charge, unless within the four corners of the law, proof of a previous conviction is allowed for the purpose of proving guilty knowledge, or whatever it might be, no question ought to be permitted and no evidence allowed to show that he is a man of bad and dishonest character. But if the accused at his trial, choose to put in issue the question of his good character, it is then competent to rebut such evidence by giving evidence of general evil reputation. 14 A. 25. This section has no bearing whatever upon the question of the relevancy of a previous conviction after an accused has been convicted of the offence with which he has been charged, and for the purpose of enhancing the lely to the relevancy of a previous is guilty, and should be convicted . L. B. R. (1872-1892.), 449.

But in other cases

the proof of previous convictions as evidence giving rise to an inference regarding the character of the prisoner is not admissible. 5 C. 758=6 C. L R. 219 ; L. B. R. (1893-1900), 93 ; 2 Pat L J. 706.

The proof of a previous conviction not contemplated by s. 75 Penal Code, may be adduced after the accused is found guilty, provided the previous conviction is relevant under the Act. 16 Bom L. R 934=26 Ind. Cas. 996.

Cases.—The fact that the accused had a bad character is not irrelevant under this section when the evidence relating to it is not given for the purpose of showing that the accused was a bad character and was therefore likely to commit offences of the kind of which he has been convicted. 2 Lah. L J. 653. Evidence of bad charac er is not admissible unless evidence of good character is given. Section 54 does not apply where bad character itself is fact in issue. A I. R. 1933 Oudh 355=10 O. W. Character as affecting damages.

55. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant.

Explanation.—In sections 52, 53, 54 and 55, the word "character" includes both reputation and disposition ; but, [except as provided in section 54,] evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

Legislative changes.—The words within brackets have been substituted by Act 3 of 1891.

Scope—In all actions or proceedings in which a plaintiff's character is actually in issue, as in actions for defamation, evidence of the plaintiff's character may be given (Scott v Sampson, L R. 8 Q. B. D. 491). In a few cases, where the amount of damages depends upon character, as in seduction and breach of promise of marriage, evidence may be given of the character of the woman seduced, or the female plaintiff, but upon the question of damages only. Very v. Watkins, 7 C. and P 308. In general in actions unconnected with character, evidence as to the character of either of the parties to a suit is inadmissible being foreign to the point in issue, and only calculated to create prejudice. For the same reason, where particular acts of misconduct are imputed to a party, evidence of general character is excluded ; but it is otherwise where general character is put in issue ; (Doed Faar v Hicks, per Buller J.) ; for evidence of bad character is admitted in some actions with a view to the amount of damages. Thus, in actions of criminal conspiracy, the defendant could adduce evidence of the wife's bad character for chastity, and even of particular acts of adultery committed by her before her intercourse with him ; for by bringing the action the husband put her general behaviour in issue. So, in seduction, the defendant may show the previous bad character of the person seduced But even in such cases, it has been held that the plaintiff cannot [illegible] of the wife or daughter, until evidence has been [illegible] ch it. Bamfield v, Massey, 1 Camp. 460 ; and if [illegible] t go only to a specific instance, it has been ruled [illegible] give evidence, of general character, but must be restricted to disproof of the specific instance ; Ibid ; Dodd v. Norris, 3 Camp. 519 So, in an action for slander imputing dishonesty to the plaintiff, he cannot adduce evidence in the first instance of good character. Stuart v. Lovell, 2 Stark. 93 ; Cornwall v. Richardson, Ry. and M. 305 ; Roscoe Ev. 87. General and not particular evidence of character of complaint is admissible and relevant for awarding damages A. I. R 1932 Nag. 158=34 Cr. L J. 154.

[illegible] , explanation is based upon the dissenting [illegible] , 10 Cox Cr. 25 Therein he observed : "I [illegible] the principal matter to be inquired into and [illegible] , and admissible only as evidence of disposition The judgment of the particular witness is superior in quality and value to mere rumour. Numerous cases may be put in which a man may have no general character—in the sense of any reputation or rumour about him at all, and yet may have a good disposition. For instance, he may be of a shy, retiring disposition, and known, only to a few, or again, he may be a person of the vilest character and disposition, and only his intimates may be able to testify that this is the case. One man may deserve that character [reputation] without having acquired it, while another man may have acquired without deserving it. In such cases the value of the judgment of a man's intimates upon his character becomes manifest. In ordinary life, when we want to know the character of a servant, we apply to his master. A servant may be known to none but members of his master's family; so the character of a child is only known to its parents and teachers, and the character of a man of business to those with whom he deals. According to the experience of mankind, one would ordinarily rely rather on the information and judgment of a man's intimates than on general report, and why not in a Court of law? But the English law is based upon the judgment of the majority according to which evidence of character must not be evidence of particular facts, only, having reference to the nature of th

Indian Legislators more wisely accepted

PART II.

On Proof.

CHAPTER III.

Facts which need not be proved.

Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved.

56. No fact of which the Court will take judicial notice need be proved.

Principle.—There are certain matters which are considered too notorious to require proof; such matters are therefore 'judicially noticed", that is to say, the Judge takes notice of their exist thereof. English law is dealt w

our law. It is qualified by another principle, also very old, and often over-topping the former in importance—non report quid notum sit judici, si notum non sit in forma judici. These two maxims seem to intimate the whole doctrine of judicial notice." Thayer, Pre Treat, on Ev. 277. When a case is presented at the bar be proved, since they are 'judicially noticed" by the Court and Jury. That is to say, there are a great many things of such common knowledge that the Courts ought to be presumed to know them—such as the Declaration of Independence; the earthquake and the great fire of San Francisco in 1906, and other matters of past history; the existence and procedure of their own Court; the public laws; the calendar, the public mortality tables; treaties entered into by their own government and many other matters of such general notoriety that every well-informed man or woman within the limits of the Court's jurisdiction must or should know. If it so happened that the proof of any such facts formed part of a litigant's case, he is excused from proving them, as it is said the Court will take judicial cognizance of their existence, or in other words they will be taken as proved. By 13 and 14 Vict. c. 12, it was enacted: "That every Act made after the commencement of this Act shall be deemed and taken to be public Act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such, unless the contrary be expressly provided and declared by such Act." This provision is now repealed by the Interpretation Act, 1889, 52 and 53 Vict. c 63, which provides by s. 8, that every Act passed after 1850 "shall be a Public Act and shall be judicially noticed, as such unless the contrary is expressly provided by the Act." CHAPTER IV.

OF ORAL EVIDENCE.

Proof of facts by oral evidence.

59. All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence.

Scope.—All facts except the contents of a document may be proved by oral evidence. The sworn testimony of a witness should not be ignored and disbelieved unless discredited or broken down by contrary proof, or by matter elicited in cross-examination, which may tend to show that the persons giving such evidence have deliberately perjured themselves, or have made a false and concocted statement, or unless the evidence is upon the face of it so absurd or improbable that no person ought to believe it A W N. 1887 189; 26 A 108 (P. But the Court can take judicial notice of facts not mentioned in this section. (See also Stephen's Dig. Art, 58).

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

Proof of facts by oral evidence.

59. All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence.

Scope.—All facts except the contents of a document may be proved by oral evidence The sworn testimony of a witness should not be ignored and disbelieved unless discredited or broken down by contrary proof, or by matter elicited in cross-examination, which may tend to show that the persons giving such evidence have deliberately perjured themselves, or have made a false and concocted statement, or unless the evidence is upon the face of it so absurd or improbable that no person ought to believe it A W. N. 1887. 189, 26 A 108 (P. C)=31 I. A. 38. It is not correct to hold that, for the determination of the merits of a case, oral testimony unsupported by documentary evidence is of no value. 18 W. R. 328 The evidence of one witness, if reliable, is not insufficient to prove a fact. 11 W. R. 94.

Discrepancies in evidence must be carefully considered and their effect allowed for, but when they can be fairly reconciled by explanation or can be naturally and reasonably accounted for evidence, otherwise trustworthy, cannot be put aside, although its value may be pro tanto impaired, solely because of their concurrence. U. B. R. (1897-1901) vol. i 162.

Oral evidence must be direct.

60. Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say—

If it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it; if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner;

if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds:

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such treatises if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided also, that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

Scope.—Direct evidence, as opposed to hearsay evidence is generally required. The evidence must be given by witness who perceived directly by one of his senses the fact to which he deposes Hearsay evidence that is the evidence of a witness as to a fact which he did not himself perceived, any other person, is not admissible, except in a fe den, 5 L. J. Ev. 218; Cockle's Cas. 149); see also 12 B L. R. App. [illegible] 363; 1924 Lah 733.

Principle.—The grounds commonly assigned for the rejection of hearsay evidence are—(1) the irresponsibility of the original declarant; (2) the depreciation of truth in the process of repetition; (3) the opportunities for fraud its admission would open. to which may be added the tendency of such evidence to protract legal inquiries and to encourage the substitution of weaker or stronger proofs. Phipson, Ev 189. CHAPTER V.

Of Documentary Evidence.

Proof of contents of documents

61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.

Scope —There are two methods of proving a document either by primary or by secondary . admissible . . . objection, ... appellate Court. 31 C. 155.

Primary evidence.

62. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation 1 —Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2 —Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest ; but, where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustration.

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original Explanation I —Where a mortgage deed has been executed in duplicate, each part would be primary evidence of the document under this section. U. B. R. (1892-1896) vol. II, 234. "Duplicate originals" or copies executed by all parties are primary evidence against all such parties. Counterparts or copies executed by certain parties only, are primary evidence against such parties only. (Cockle Cas. 308).

Secondary evidence.

63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained ;

(2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies ;

(3) copies made from or compared with the original ;

(4) counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them ;

(5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations.

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) A copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence ; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

Scope—This section is exhaustive of the kinds of secondary evidence admissible under the Act. 43 M. L. J. 37; see also 10 Ind. Cas 852. Statement of witness abstracted in judgment given in previous suit cannot be used in lieu of original statement. 33 M. L. W. 20=60 M. L. J. 13=53 M. 952=1930 M. W. N. 601=A. I. R. 1933 Mad, 207. Register containing copies made directly from originals is legally admissible. A. I. R. 1931 Oudh 146=6 Luck. 619.

Clause (1)—Certified copies mean copies signed and certified as correct by official having custody of originals. They are allowed as evidence by various statutes. (Cockle Cas. 323.)

Clause (2).—Vide Illustrations (b) and (c).

Clause (3).—This clause includes copies proved by oral evidence to have been examined with and to correspond with the originals. The witness may either have examined the copy which another person, not called as a witness read from the original. All public documents may be proved in the manner, but certified or office copies are generally used when available (Cockle Cas. 323). See also 1924 Nag. 375; 20 L. W. 719.

Clause (4).—"Counterparts" or copies executed by certain parties only, are primary evidence against such parties only. Cockle Cas. 308.

Clause (5).—66 Ind Cas 557; 36 Ind. Cas 696. "Seen" includes also "read over". 73 Ind. Cas. 654; see also 71 Ind. Cas. 654, 80 Ind. Cas 939=(1924) All 792.

Illustration (c).—A copy of a copy is inadmissible in evidence. 54 Ind. Cas. 941=1 P. L. T. 47; 7 A. 738.

Cases.—No secondary evidence can be given of a document, which is not proved to have been written by the accused or to have ever existed. 8 A. L. J. 302=12 Cr. L. J. 259=10 Ind. Cas. 852. It is not open to the appellate Court to consider whether the provisions as to secondary evidence have been complied with. 3 Pat. L. T. 397. A statement made by a party or his authorized agent in a previous suit, in which he refers to a document which is against his interest, is secondary evidence of that document. 53 Ind. Cas. 667; see also, 25 M. L. T. 19. A translation of a Purwana or grant is not secondary evidence of that grant and so it is not admissible in evidence. 35 Ind Cas 201=4 L. W. 331.

Proof of documents by primary evidence.

64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

Scope.—Secondary evidence is not admissible where less of primary evidence is not proved. As regards documents the best evidence in the possession or power of the party tendering it must be given. Generally, the best evidence of a document is the original document, which is, "primary evidence" of its contents. Such original must be produced unless its absence is accounted for. Macdonnel v. Evans, 21 L. J. C. P. 141. The original document must be produced whenever there is a question as to its contents or terms, unless for special reasons secondary evidence is allowed. R. v. Elworthy, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 103=37 L. J. M. C. 3; R. v. Hunt, 3; B. and Ald. 566. But when the loss of the original has not been proved and inspite of that the Court of first instance admitted a copy of the sale certificate, without any objection from the other party, no objection can be taken in the appellate Court. 3 L. B. R. 40.

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given.

65. Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases:—

(a) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it ;

(b) when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest ;

ost, or when the party

(d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily movable ;

(e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74 ,

(f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this act, or by any other law in force in British India, to be given in evidence ;

(g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c) and (d) any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible.

ocument, but no other kind of

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

Scope—Ss. 65 and 66 must be complied with before admitting secondary evidence. A I. R 1933 All. 690=34 Cr L. J. 967=1933 A. L. J. 799 ; see also A. I. Clause (a)—Secondary evidence of a document is admissible when the original is in possession of an adverse or opposite party, who refuses to produce it after a proper notice to produce. The object of a notice to produce is merely to give the other party sufficient opportunity to produce the document if he pleases, and not that he may have time to consider the terms of the document, and to prepare evidence or argument in support of or against it. Therefore, where the document is in Court at the time of the trial, a notice to produce it immediately is sufficient to render secondary evidence of its contents admissible if it be not produced. 21 L. J. Ex. 925 ; Cockle Cas. 314. Secondary evidence of a document is also admissible when the original is in the hands of a stranger, or third person, who is, on the ground of privilege, not compellable by law to produce it, and who refuses to do so, either when summoned as a witness with a "subpoena duces tecum" or when sworn as a witness without a subpoena if he admits that he has the document in Court. Mills v. Oddy, 6 C. and P. 728 ; Cockle Cas. 316. But where he can be compelled to produce the document, secondary evidence is not competent. R. v. Inhabitants of Leanfathely, 23 L. J M. C. 33 ; Cockle Cas. 317. The law requires that a party shall do all that he can legally do to compel production of a document by a stranger before he puts in secondary evidence against an opponent. Cockle Cas. 318 ; see also 12 Ind. Secondary evidence of the contents of the documents referred to in section 65, clause (a), shall not be given unless the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party in whose possession or power the document is, [or to his attorney or pleader,] such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law ; and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case :

(2) when, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it ;

(3) when it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained document ;

(6) when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.

Proof of signature and handwritng of person allege l to have signed or written document produced.

67. If a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting.

Scope—To prove the execution of a bill of sale executed in their favour by the plaintiff's father, the defendant called a Kazi, who deposed that the vendor came before him accompanied by witnesses, and acknowledged the execution of the deed, which was then registered. The lower appellate Court found it was sufficiently proved. On special appeal to the High Court it was contended that the execution was not sufficiently proved under this section Held, that the proof of execution was sufficient : direct evidence of the handwriting of the executant was not necessary under s 67. 12 B L R. Although under s. 67, no particular kind of poof is required for the purpose of establishing the fact of execution it must nevertheless be shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the mark or signature denoting execution was actually fixed to the document by the person who professed to execute it A Court is not bound to treat registration or endorsement as conslusive proof of the fact of execution. 46 Ind. Notes.—The plaintiffs sued the heirs of a mortgagor on a mortgage deed, execution of which was denied. In order to prove the deed, witnesses were examined who were acquainted with the handwriting of two of the attesting witnesses, who were admittedly dead. There was no evidence on record to show that the other attesting witnesses were not alive or were not subject to the process of the Court. There was only a statement by the plaintiff's pleader to the effect that he had been unable to ascertain their whereabouts. Held, that under the provisions of the Evidence Act, evidence could not be admitted to prove the signature of the attesting witnesses until the absence of all the attesting witnesses had been duly accounted for. 11 Ind Cas. 225; see also 34 A. 615; 10 A. Admission of execution by party to attested document.

70. The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested.

Scope.—Now this section is to be read subject to the proviso to section 68 supra. According to English law a document which requires attestation must be proved by one of the attesting witnesses and this is so even if the person by whom the document was executed has admitted its execution by himself. But this section deviates from that view and lays down that where its execution is admitted by the party an attesting witness need not be called. The term "admission" relates only to the admission of party in the course of the trial of a suit, and not to the attestation of a document by the admission of the party executing it. 27 C. 190 ; 7 N. L. R. 85 ; 7 C. W. N. 384. Non-admission of execution is effectual under this section unless it amounts to an acknowledgment of the formal validity of the instrument. 36 C. L. J 373. The word "execution" in this section means that the party by affixing his signature or mark has signified his assent to the contents of the document, and if a party admits that he has done this, he admits execution. 24 Bom. L. R. 1296. This section was intended to dispense with the necessity of calling attesting witnesses and with formally proving execution in a case where the party admitted it. 19 A. L. J. 855. Where there are two executants to a mortgage-deed attestation may be according to law in respect of one of them but not in respect of the other. 47 Ind. Proof when attesting witness denies the execution

71. If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its, execution may be proved by other evidence.

Scope.—This section is also to be read subject to the proviso of section 68. Comparison of signature, writing or seal with others admitted or proved.

73. In order to ascertain whether a signature, writing or seal is that of the person by whom it purports to have been written or made, any signature, writing or seal admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been written or made by that person, may be compared with the one which is to be proved, although that signature, writing or seal has not been produced or proved, for any other purpose.

The Court may direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person.

[This section applies also, with any necessary modifications, to finger-impressions.]

Legislative chanses.—The last para was added by Act 5 of 1899.

Scope—Under this section it is not necessary that the writing which is dispute must itself be in terms express or indicate that it was written by person to whom the writing is attributed. The word "purports" in the section means "alleged". 14 Bom. L. R. 310=15 Ind. Cas. 649. See Un. Cr. C. 491; see also 48 Ind. Cas. 68=35 M. L. J. 698. Scope.—Besides certified copies there are special ways of proving certain public documents which are pointed out in this section (Cunningham, Ev. 270). Newspaper extract is not admissible. 129 Ind. Cas. 443=1930 A. L. J. 1535=A. I. R. 1931 All 12.

Presumptions as to Documents.

Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies.

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting to be a certificate, certified copy of other document, which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in British India, or by any officer in any Native State in alliance with Her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Governor General in Council, to be genuine :

Provided that such document is substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in that behalf.

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified, held, when he signed it, the official character which he claims in such paper.

Scope.—The registering officer's evidence is not necessary to prove the certificate of registration the genuineness of which is to be presumed under this section. 71 Ind. Cas. 805.

Presumption as to documents produced as records of evidence.

80. Whenever any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a record or memorandum of the evidence, or ment or confession by any prisoner or accused person, taken in accordance with law, and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, or by any such officer as aforesaid, the Court shall presume—that the document is genuine ; that any statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true, and that such evidence, statement or confession was duly taken.

Scope.—The statement as to which this section says that certain presumptions shall be drawn are statements or confessions taken in accordance with the law. The section does not render admissible any particular kind of evidence, but only dispenses with the necessity for formal proof in the case of certain documents taken in accordance with law. Section 80 does not operate to render it admissible. The section merely gives legal sanction to the maxim "Omnia preasumuntur rite esse acta" with regard to documents taken in the course of a judicial proceeding. 9 M. 224=2 Weir. 125. Presumption as to Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents.

81. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every document purporting to be the London Gazette or the Gazette of India or the Government Gazette of any Local Government, or of any colony, dependency or possession of the British Crown, or to be a newspaper or journal, or to be a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the Queen's Printer, and of every document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person, if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody.

English law—The Government Gazettes of London, Edinburgh and Dublin are admissible (and sometimes conclusive) evidence of the public, but not of the private matters contained therein. Phipson, Ev. 296. High Court can presume genuineness of notification produced before it and hold production sufficient under s. 81. 134 Ind. Cas. 769=32 Cr. L. J. 1227=A. I. R. 1931 Lah. 273.

Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature.

82. When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which by the law in force for the time being in England and Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature, is genuine and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland.

Scope—"The object of this section is to give currency in the Courts of India to the presumptions which with regard to certain classes of documents are recognised in the English Courts Such documents are declared to be admissible in India are admissible in English law" Cunningham, Ev. 175, 176. This section enacts that the document shall be admissible in India for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England and Ireland (Woodroffe, Ev.).

Presumption as to maps or plans made by authority of Government

83. The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government were so made, and are accurate; but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

Principle—The general ground of reception is that such documents contain the results of inquiries made under competent public authority and concerning matters in which the public are interested (Phipson, Ev. 313).

Accuracy.—Accuracy of Amin's map means accuracy of drawing and measurement It has no reference to correctness of boundaries, etc., in relation to rights of parties. 25 W. R. 179. Government map is admissible under this section 9 M. L. T. 415. But Government chittas made for its private use are not admissible in evidence against private parties for proving the character or tenure of the lands, described therein 9 C. 741. Presumption as to collections of laws and reports of decisions.

84. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the government of any country, and to contain any of the laws of that country, and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country.

Scope.—The general rule, as to the proof of foreign law, is that the law which is written, that is, statute law, must be proved by a copy properly authenticated; and the unwritten law must be proved by the testimony of experts, that is, by those acquainted with the law. Bur Jones § 502. Lord Chief Justice Denham observed in Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Clark and F. 85; "There does not appear to be in fact any real difference of opinion—there is no question raised here as to any executive mode of getting at this evidence for we have both materials of knowledge offered to us. We have the witness, and he states the law, which he says is correctly laid down in these books The books are produced, but the witness describes them as [illegible] admitted in such Courts"

Presumption as to powers-of-attorney.

85. The Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power-of-attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice Consul, or representative of Her Majesty, or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated.

Cases.—A power-of-attorney given by the executors under a Will to a certain person authorising him to apply for letters of administration, did not purport to have been executed in the presence of a Notary Public or any other of the persons designated in this section. 21 M. 492 In order to comply with the provisions of this section, the power-of-attorney must be executed before or be authenticated by one of the persons mentioned in the section. 16 C. 776. This section is mandatory. When [illegible] been executed before, [illegible] the Court, an affidavit of [illegible] er-of-attorney being the [illegible] 3 C. 625. The language [illegible] vision contained in this section is of an exhaustive character and that other legal modes of proving the excution of a power-of-attorney are not admissible. 21 M. 492. A registered power-of-attorney is admissible in evidence to prove the agency under this section and unless its genuineness is suspected in which case proof of its execution can be called for, the agent should be allowed to appear and act within the meaning of O. III rule 2 of C. P. Code. 23 Ind. Cas. 661.

Presumption as to certified copies of foreign judicial records.

86. The Court may presume that any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of any country not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions is genuine and accurate, if the document purports to be certified in any manner which is certified by any representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India [in or for] such country to be the manner commonly is use in that country for the certification of copies of judicial records.

[An officer who, with respect to any territory or place not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions is a Political Agent therefor, as defined in section 3, clause (40), of the General Clauses Act, 1897,* shall for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a representative of the Government of India in and for the country comprising that territory or place].

Legislative changes—The words within brackets in para I have been substituted by Act 3 of 1891. The last para has been substituted by Act V of 1899, s 4.

Scope—This section lays down that if a copy of a foreign judicial record

87. The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.

Presumption as to books, maps and charts.

Scope.—A Court is justified in referring to books published long before the suit, in which the usage of the institution and its history are described both being matters relevant to the suit. 15 M. 241.

88. The Court may presume that a message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent; but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission.

Presumption as to telegraphic messages

Scope—This section allows the Courts to treat telegraphic messages received, as if they were the original sent, with the exception, that a presumption is not to be made as to the person by whom they were delivered for transmission and, unless the non-production of the original is accounted for, secondary evidence of their contents is inadmissible U. B. R (1847-1901), Vol. II. 384. The Court is forbidden by the express provisions of this section to make any presumption as to the person by whom the telegram was sent. 42 M. 85=37 M.L.J. 81. Where original of telegram was not proved to be in handwriting of sender, no presumption arises under s. 88. A I. R 1933 Pat. 96=34 Cr. L J 421=13 P L. T. 802

89. The Court shall presume that every document, called for and not produced after notice to produce was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law.

Presumption as to due execution, etc, of documents not produced

90. Where any document, purporting or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and, in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested.

Presumtion as to documents thirty years old.

Explanation—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which, and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be; but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable.

This explanation applies also to section 81.

Illustrations.

(c) A, a connection of B, produces deeds relating to lands in B's possessions which were deposited with him by B for safe custody. The custody is proper.

Scope.—A document thirty years old i. e. a document dated thirty years back. proves itself, if produced from proper custody as an ancient document. Anderson v. Weston, 9 L. J. C. P. 194. It is open to a party when producing an old document to rely on the presumption under this section and also on its proof and the Court may presume a deed to be genuine even though it is not satisfied with the evidence tendered to prove its execution. 49 Ind. CHAPTER VI.

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Evidence of terms of contracts, grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document

91. When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant or other dispositon of property, or of such matter except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Exception 1.—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved.

Exception 2—Will [admitted to probate in British India] may be proved by the probate.

cases in which the contracts, contained in one document, documents than one.

Explanation 2.—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved.

Explanation 3.—The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.

Illustrations.

(a) If a contract be contained in several letters, all the letters in which it is contained must be proved.

(b) If a contract is contained in a bill of exchange, the bill of exchange must be proved.

(c) If a bill of exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d) A contracts, in writing, with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms. The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

Oral evidence is offered that no payment was made for the other indigo. The evidence is admissible.

(e) A gives B a receipt for money paid by B.

Oral evidence is offered of the payment.

The evidence is admissible.

Legislative Changes.—The words within brackets in exception 2, were substituted for the words "under the Indian Succession Act" by the Indian Evidence Act, Amendment Act, 1872 (18 of 1872) s 7.

Scope—The general rule laid down in this section is that when the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of contract except the document itself, or in certain cases, secondary evidence of its contents. But this rule is subject to the important exceptions contained in ss. 95 and 97 30 M. 397; L. B. R. (1872-1892), 650. Where the document containing the transaction is inadmissible for want of registration, no other evidence of the terms of the contract can be received. L. B. R. (1872-1892), 133. When the reduced to writing no evidence of it is .. R (1897-1901) Vol. II. 396. A question a question as to the terms of the contract 45.

Principle.—This rule is founded on the best evidence principle. (Phipson, Ev. 506).

Contract—It seems more probable that the word "contract" was employed in a wide and general sense with reference to the whole of the transaction or transactions between all the parties in their several respective relations. U. B. R. (1892-1896) Vol. II. 354 Verbal negotiations leading to express contract in writing can not be set up as independent contract. A. I J. 64; see also 34 Bom. L R. 748=A. R 1933 Mad. 71=1932 M. W. N. 1260=37 M. L. W. 723; A. I. R. 1934 Rang. 389 (F. B.).

Grant—It is doubtful whether the word 'grant' in this section means a grant of property only or refers to other grants also. 27 M. 30.

Application—Where a private transaction is required by law to be in writing e. g, a Will, insurance, or where a contract, gra so required has been reduced to w ...ded to be complete and operative as such,—no extrinsic evidence is admissible to supersede the document or to prove the transaction independently (Phipson, Ev. 508). This rule is applicable even when the real terms were acted upon before reduction to writing, and although the document itself is inadmissible, e. g., a bill of sale void for want of registration or stamp. Where, however the oral transaction is independent of the document, e. g., ...nding, although a , secured collater- e. Even between strangers, the terms of the transaction can only be shown by the production of the document itself and not by oral testimony. (Phipson, Ev. 509). Oral evidence to prove intention of executant is not admissible. A. I. R. 1933 All. 186; see also A. I. R. 1934 Lah. 181.

Exception (1)—The law assumes that any act done in public or any formal act privately performed will be done in due form by the person authorised to perform it. Harris v. Knight, 15 P. D. 170.

Exception (2).—The probate of a Will is in the nature of a public document, for it records the act of the Court in admitting the Will to probate. Moreover, a copy of the probate can be seen by any one at Court on payment of requisite fees. It constitutes the legal proof of the title of an executor and it is conclusive against all the world. It is a copy of the Will sealed with the seal of the Court granting the probate, and attached to a certificate which states that the Will has been proved and registered, and that administration of the goods of the deceased has been granted to one or more of the executors named therein. (Vide Powell, Ev. 258).

Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement

92. When the terms of any such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or substracting from, its terms ;

Proviso (1)—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document, or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto ; such as fraud, intimidation, illegality, want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, [want or failure] of consideration, or mistake in fact or law.

Proviso (2)—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.

Proviso (3)—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved.

Proviso (4)—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents

Proviso (5).—Any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description, may be proved :

Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to, or inconsistent, with the express terms of the contract.

Proviso (6).—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts

March 1873. ... oney should ... ch contains a map of the property sold The fact that land not included in the map had always been regarded as part of the estate and was meant to pass by the deed cannot be proved.

(d) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B's as to their value This fact may be proved.

(e) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.

(f) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of ... rice. A may show

A hires lodgings of B for a year, and a regularly stamped agreement, drawn up by an attorney, is made between them. It is silent on the subject of board. A may not prove that board was included in the term verbally.

(i) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money. In a suit for the amount A may prove this.

Legislative changes.—The words "want or failure" were substituted for the words "want of failure" by s. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1872 (18 of 1872).

Notes.—The rule contained in this section is very ancient. Lord Bacon observed: "The law will not couple and mingle matter of specialty, which is of higher account, with matter of averment which is of inferior account in law" (Bacon's Maxims, Reg 23). "It would be inconvenient that matters in writing made by advice and on consideration, and which finally import the certain truth of the agreement of the parties should be controlled by averment of the parties to be proved by the uncertain testimony of slippery memory.' Scope.—Parol evidence is not admissible to add, to vary or contradict a written agreement, or any transaction in writing. Meres v. Ansel, 3 Wilson 275; Cockle Cas. 339. "Another and a most important rule of evidence is also based upon the fact that the best method of preserving a clear recollection of the details of any transaction is to set them down in writing. It is for this reason that whenever the ... perty have set out its ... to be a record of ... ther terms by means ... party to alter his liability by introducing terms which are not to be found in the document. Hence it is a clear rule of law that whenever a document purports to be the record of the ıal intention and agreement of two parties, who have entered into any contract · made any grant of transfer of property, no parol evidence is admissible to contract to vary its terms" (Powell, Ev. 181). Oral evidence cannot be adduced to contradict the terms of a written document. 6 M. H. C. 393, see also L B. R. (1872-392), 538, 11 W. R. 450, 12 W. R 264, W. R 1864, 388. Verbal evidence is not admissible to vary or alter the terms of a written contract in cases in which there is o fraud or mistake, and in which the parties intend to express in writing what their words import—as for instance, to show that a deed of sale was intended to operate as a mortgage. 5 W. R. 68, 9 W. R. 251.

Proviso (1).—Parol evidence is admissible to show that a writing is not really the valid transaction which it purports to be Such evidence may therefore be given to prove fraud, mistake, illegality, incapacity, failure of consideration, or other matters affecting the validity of a writing as a document. (Dobell v. Stevens, 3 L. J. K. B. 89; Cockle Cas 341).

Cases—82 Ind Cas. 861, A. I R. 1934 All. 496=148 Ind. Cas. 1124.

Proviso (2)—Parol evidence is admissible to prove any collateral verbal agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, which is separable from it and not inconsistant with its terms, and which might naturally be omitted from the writing. (L. R. 6 Ex 70=Cockle Cas 343) There is no rule that there shall be only one agreement upon any subject. There may be two or more as in the case, if they can consistently stand together; and one may be written and the other oral. If proceedings are taken on the written agreement evidence may be given of the oral agreement. This is not "adding to" the written agreement although it may, at first sight look like it (Cock'e Cas. 343). In order that parol evidence may be admissible to prove a collateral agreement, it must not conflict with, or be inconsistent with the written document; the evidence must not amount in effect to adding additional terms to the writing Angell v Duke, 32 L T. 320. This proviso applies where the document is of an informal character. 7 N L. Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts

94. When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Illustration.

Scope.—"This section falls under the more general rule of English law that where the words of a document are free from ambiguity, and external circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to the proper application of the words, the document is to be construed according to the plain and common meaning of the words, and that, in such case, extrinsic evidence, for the purpose of explaining the document according to the supposed intention of the parties is inadmissible." *Cunn. When the language used in a document is plain and applies accurately to existing facts, evidence is not admissible for the purpose of showing that it was not meant to apply to those facts. 29 Ind. R. 61 When a Court is executing an award it is only in cases where the words are ambiguous or capable of more than one interpretation that oral evidence can be given as to their meaning. 78 Ind. Evidence as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts

95. When language used in a document is plain in itself, but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

A had no house in Calcutta, but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed.

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howrah.

Scope—This section and sections 96 and 97 lay down the rule as regards latent ambiguities. Parol evidence is admissible to show the subject matter to which, or the persons to whom, a written instrument applies or refers ; and for such purpose to explain the latent ambiguities. Such parol evidence may be of the surrounding circumstances, or apparently, of statements of intention made by parties to a document. Doe v Needs, 6 L J. Ex. 59, Cockle Cas. 355, see also A. I. R. 1934 Cal. 569. Where the description of property sold is such that one portion of it applies to the whole of the house but the boundaries given below apply only to a portion of the same and both read together do not apply correctly either to the whole house or to a portion of it, a case of latent ambiguity arises. Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons.

96. When the facts are such that the language used might have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one, of several persons or things, evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

Such parol evidence may be of the surrounding circumstances, for, apparently, of statements of intention made by parties to a document. Doe v. Needs, 6 L. J. Ex. 59. Production and Effect of Evidence.

CHAPTER VII.

Of the Burden of Proof.

Burden of proof.

101. Whoever desires any Court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability, dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts must prove that those facts exist.

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact, it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person.

Illustrations.

(a) A desires a Court to give judgment that B shall be punished for a crime which A says B has committed.

A must prove that B has committed the crime.

(b) A desires a Court to give judgment that he is entitled to certain land in the possession of B, by reason of facts which he asserts, and which B denies, to be true.

A must prove the existence of those facts.

*See now Act XXXIX of 1925

Different meaning of the term.—The expression "burden of proof" has been used in a double sense : (a) As meaning the duty of the person alleging the case to prove it, (b) As meaning the duty of the one party or the other to introduce evidence.

1.—" The theory of burden of proof it is a simple principle and one a case, and has become from long t seems the only reasonable and is naturally upon the person who puts it forward. The burden of proof in any action is fixed by the pleadings upon the shoulders of the one party or the other. If the pleadings consist of the allegations of certain facts by the plaintiff, and their denial by the defendant the burden of tive, is upon the plaintiff. In order to alleges certain facts, and the defen- which he claims to be a defence, the burden of proof is on the defendant. It is not upon the plaintiff, because it is not necessary for him to prove his case on account of the admission of all the facts. An admission upon the trial does not affect the burden of proof. To relieve the plaintiff it must be a formal admission in the defendant's pleading of the facts which constitute the plaintiff's case. The defendant, if he sets up in his answer other facts which he claims to be a defence, is then the one who has alleged the facts which are in issue; and he must prove them " McKelvey's Law of Evidence, p. 68.

Bu: necess of the issue r issue, one party and of others on the other party. The position is practically this, that judgment would be given as given sufficient evidence given, the burden of proof shifts to the other party, and may be repeatedly so shifted. In a criminal case there is generally no difficulty, as all the allegations are invariably made by the prosecution on whom the general burden of proof invariably lies. So the burden of proof of any particular fact in issue is upon the party who alleges the affirmative of such fact. This rule as to the burden of proof applies generally to negative averments (Cockle Cas 123=124) See also 35 C. 1051 ; 9 W. R. 192 ; 39 C. 245 ; 47 M. 337 (P. C)= 46 M. L J 546 ; 75 Ind. Cas 733, 3 U. P. L. R. 44.

On whom burden of proof lies

102. The burden of proof in a suit or proceeding lies on that person who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues B for land of which B is in possession, and which, as A asserts, was left to A by the Will of C, B's father.

If no evidence were given on either side, B would be entitled to retain his possession

B says that it was obtained by fraud,

If no evidence were given on either side, A would succeed as the bond is not disputed and the fraud is not proved.

Therefore the burden of proof is on B.

party who would be unsuccess- uch party has the right to begin. upon the party who allows the 64 ; Cockle Cas. 125). In determining burden of proof the Court should consider what is the substantive fact to be made out, and on whom it lies to make out. It is not so much the form of the issue which ought to be considered as the substance and effect of it. Soward v. Leggatt, 7 C. and P. 613 "The test, therefore, as to the burden of proof or onus of proof whichever term is used, is simply this : to ask one-self which party will be successful if no evidence is given, (or if no more evidence is given...the parties from moment to moment may reach points at which the onus of proof shifts. As soon as he brings evidence which, until it is answered, rebuts the evidence against which he is contending, then the balance descends on the other side, and the burden rolls over until again there is evidence which once more turns the scale." Per Bawen L. J. in Abrath v. North-Western Railway Co., L. R. 11 Q B. D 440. In the same case Brett M. R. says. "But then, it is contended (I think fallaciously) that if the plaintiff has given prima facie evidence which, unless it be answered, will entitle ... burden of proof is shifted to the ... cannot assent to it. It seems ... The plaintiff may give prima ... contradictory evidence or by the evidence of additional facts, ought to lead the jury to find the question in his favour. The defendant may give evidence either by contradicting the plaintiff's evidence or by proving other facts. The jury have to consider, upon the evidence given upon both sides, whether they are satisfied in favour of the plaintiff with respect to the question which he calls upon to answer. If they are they must find for the plaintiff; but if upon a consideration of the facts, they come clearly to the opinion that the question ought to be answered against the plaintiff, they ... difficulty : Suppose the jury, ... as to which way they are to ... intiff; in that case, also the ... been able by the additional ... whole jury to a real state of ... proof which was upon him". So the burden of proof fixes upon the party who has the duty of first going forward with the case. If he ... ie case to the Court, the ... e Court may or may not find ... If however, he has intro- ... "prima facie case," then in ... Court would be bound to find in his favour.

Right here we run up against the other sort of burden of proof noticed above, which is not really burden of proof at all, but only the use of that term to express something very different When the plaintiff has introduced enough evidence to ... he verdict for the ... or weaken the ... n of going for- ... d to distinguish ... proof is only a ... es to win, rests " ... 103 The burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall lie on any particular person.

Burden of proof as to particular fact

(a) A prosecutes B for theft, and wishes the Court to believe that B admitted the theft to C. A must prove the admission.

Cases.—27 A. 71=1 A. L. J. 423 ; 11 B. 433 ; U. B. R. (1897-1901) Vol II, 412 ; U. B. R. (1897-1901) Vol. II, 407.

Scope.—The term "burden of proof" is used in two senses : as regards (1) the whole case, (2) particular facts. Section 10 deals with burden of proof of the first class and this section deals with burden of proof of the second class. The burden of proof of any particular fact in issue is upon the party who alleges the affirmative of such fact. It is only necessary to add, and to emphasise, that the substance, and not the mere form of the pleading is to be considered. The position can not be altered, nor can the Court be misled by the ingenious manipulation of language. This rule as to the burden of proof applies generally to negative averments unless by reason of their complexity or difficulty of poof or by virtue of some statutory provision the burden is upon the person denying the allegatio[illegible] meaning. The whole of the facts, however, numerous and complicated, which go to make up the prisoner's guilt must be proved by the prosecution. If the prisoner wishes to prove a particular fact, his alibi, for instance, he must prove it. If the prosecutor wishes to prove the case, not by independent oral testimony, but by the isolated fact of the prisoner's admission, or if he wishes to throw that is an additional fact, he must prove it. (Norton, Ev. 289-90).

Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible.

104. The burden of proving any fact necessary to be proved in order to enable any person to give evidence of any other fact is on the person who wishes to give such evidence.

Illustrations.

(a) A wishes to prove a dying declaration by B. A must prove B's death

(b) A wishes to prove, by secondary evidence, the contents of a lost document. A must prove that the document has been lost.

Scope.—The meaning of this section is that no person shall be allowed to give evidence before he has shown that he is in a legal position to do so. Vide, s. 136. Clause 2 (Norton, Ev. 290).

Burden of proving that case of accused comes within exceptions.

105. When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the General Exceptions in the Indian Penal Code,* or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.

A is charged with voluntarily causing grievous hurt under section 325.

Scope—In criminal cases, the general rule is that the prosecution must prove the facts alleged by it. This section is an exception to the general rule. Under the provision of this section, an answer setting up the right of private defence, must be supported by evidence, giving a full and true account of the transaction from which the charge against an accused person arises. Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years.

Legislative Changes.—The words within brackets were substituted by Act 18 of 1872.

Scope.—There is a presumption that a person who is proved not to have been heard of for seven years, by those who would be likely to hear of him if living, is dead; but there is no presumption that he died at any particular time. Nepean v I . . . v. Henderson, 2 Sim & (. . . hich the Court presumes . . . for a long period of time, is this—that, if he were living, he would probably have communicated with some of his friends and relatives. A. W. N. 1884, 84 This principle is applied by the English Courts to transactions between legal or medical practitioners and their patients, spiritual advisers and members of their congregations, trustees and their cestues que-trustent, guardians and wards (Cunningham's Evidence, 305) Where the husband stood in a position of active confidence to his wife and she entered into a transaction under his guidance the burden of proving good faith is on him. Birth during marriage conclusive proof of legitimacy.

112. The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten.

Scope.—"In every case where a child is born in lawful wedlock, the husband not being separated from his wife by sentence of divorce sexual intercourse is presumed to have taken place between the husband and wife, until that presumption is encountered by such evidence as proves, to the satisfaction of those who are to decide the question, that such sexual intercourse did not take place at any time, when, by such intercourse, the husband could, according to the laws of nature, be the father of such child." Per Sir James Mansfield in Banbury Peerage Case, 1 L. Court may presume existence of certain facts.

114 The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case.

Illustrations.

The Court may presume—

(a) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession;

(h) that, if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him ;

But the Court shall also have regard to such facts as the following, in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before it :—

Estoppel.

Estoppel.

115. When one person has, by his declaration, act or omission, intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed, in any suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative, to deny the truth of that thing.

Illustration.

The land afterwards becomes the property of A, and A seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that, at the time of the sale, he had no title. He must not be allowed to prove his want of title.

Estoppels.—Most admissions can be withdrawn; the fact that they were made remains, but the party who made them can be heard to explain that he made them rashly and carelessly, or under an honest misapprehension, or even that he knew what he said to be false. Kind of estoppels.—According to English law estoppels are of three kinds: (1) By Record; (2) By Deed; and (3) By Conduct.

Estoppels by record.—The judgment of a competent Court is an instance of this kind of estoppel. Vide ss. 40-44 supra.

Estoppels by Deed.—Where a man has entered into a solemn engagement by deed under his hand and seal as to certain facts, neither he or any one claiming through or under him is permitted to deny the facts. (Phipson, Ev. 606.)

Estoppels by conduct—Estoppels by conduct, or, as they are still sometimes called, estoppels by matter in pais, were anciently acts of notoriety not less solemn and formal than the execution of a deed, such as living of seisin, entry, acceptance of an estate, and the like and whether a party had or had not concurred in an act of this sort was deemed a matter which there could be no difficulty in ascertaining and then the legal consequences followed. The meaning of this section is that no declaration, act or omission will amount to an estoppel unless it has caused the person whom it concerns to alter his position; and to do this he must both believe the facts stated or suggested by it and act upon such belief. 7 A 878 (F. B.); see also 7 C. L. R. 481.

Estoppel—Point—of law.—There is no estoppel by reason of misrepresentation on a point of law and a transaction which is invalid can be declared to be such at the instance of either party alone. 82 Ind. Cas 126. Representation on a matter of law i. e., as to the validity of an adoption creates no estoppel. 70 Ind. Cas. 653. An admission on a point of law is not an admission of a "thing" so as to make the admission a matter of estoppel within the meaning of this section. 21 A. 285.

Person—A minor is not estopped from setting up his minority. As judicially interpreted the Contract Act makes contracts entered into by a minor void and the Court should not be compelled to pronounce them valid by the provisions contained in the Evidence Act. It is not apparently the case that the word "person" in the section does not include a 'minor" or 'certified lunatic" or other person under a disability to contract owing to imbecility of judgment But it might be held that such a person could not be held to have intentionally caused anything. When the law of contract declared that an infant would not be liable upon a contract or in the Statute of Fraud in connection with a contract he cannot be made liable on the same contract by means of an estoppel: in other words there can be no doubt about the general law that the principle of estoppel which is a provision of adjective law cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provision of a Statue 71 Ind Cas. 161; 20 C W. N. 418; see also 9 A L. J. 105; 8 A. L. J. 1058; contra. 31 A 21; 33 C. 126; 15 C W N. 239; 21 B 198; 19 Bom. L. R. 561; 23 Bom. L R. 975. In the latter case it was also held that "person" includes minor or lunatic. See also 25 C. 316 : 1 Lah. 389; 60 Ind Cas. 267. Section 115 does not apply to minors. The term "person" in that section applies to one who is of full age and competent to enter into a contract. 26 C. 381=3 C. W. N. 468.

Declaration, act or omission—The estoppel under this section may arise by reason either of a declaration, an act or an omission, but in either case there must be an intention on the part of person against whom the estoppel operates to cause or permit a belief in the mind of another. In the case of a mere omission no such intention can well be imputed unless the true facts are known to the person whose omission is in question, but where there is a deliberate declaration or act causing or permitting such belief and inducing another to act upon it, it must be presumed that such declaration or act was intended to have its ordinary and natural effect upon the mind and actions of the other party. 67 Ind Cas 744 Estoppel is purely a personal bar operating against the person whose conduct constitutes it, and against his privies and representatives. 14 C 401; 17 M. 473.

Adoption—Where an adoption made by a Hindu widow is invalid for want of permission from her deceased husband she is not estopped from repudiating or denying it by the circumstance of her having for sometime treated it as effective. An adoption ab initio invalid may be raised to the level of a valid adoption on the ground of estoppel only when, by a course of conduct long continued on the part of the family which has purported to affiliate him his situation in his original family has been so altered that it would be impossible to restore him in it. 18 M.

Principle—In Cook v. Laxley, 5 T. R. 5; Cockle Case, 52 Lord Kenyon, C. J. laid down. Conforming to the uniform decisions in all the cases upon this subject] I ruled at the trial, and continue to entertain the same opinion, that in an action for use and occupation it would not be permitted to a tenant, who occupies land by the license of another, to call upon the other to show the title under which he let the land. This is not a mere technical rule, but is founded on public convenience and policy."

Scope—The estoppel of a tenant is one of the most noticeable instances estoppel by conduct. (Cockle Cas. 53). By this section, a tenant is only preclu

"during the continuance of the tenancy" from denying that the landlord had 'at the beginning of the tenancy' a title to the property, the subject of the tenancy. The words of the section leave it open to the tenant to show that his landlord's title has subsequently expired. 11 Bom. L. R. 1093; see also A. I. R. 1934 Pat. 555=15 P. L. T. 519; A. I. CHAPTER IX.

OF WITNESSES.

Who may testify.

118. All persons shall be competent to testify, unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answer to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind.

Explanation.—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them.

Comment—Evidence must be given by legally competent witnesses, The normal man is competent and presumed to be so. The law of competency is therefore practically the law of incompetency, consisting of rules of exclusion.

Formerly there were several grounds of exclusion of witnesses. the chief being (1) incompetency from interest and (2) incompetency from mental incapacity. On ids and wives , or otherwise abolished this to affect credibility only —Cockle Cas. 243.

Scope.—Under this section all persons are competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are incapable of giving evidence or understanding the questions put to them by reason of tender years, extreme old age, disease whether of body or mind or an atic, if he is capable of understanding swers is a competent witness. The a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation, and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed. In determining the question of competency the Court under this section, has not to knowledge of the in, in the best understanding, or done on a age can satisfy een Empress v. is a competent witness in both civil and criminal cases, except a child who does not understand the nature of an oath. Powell, Ev. 197. But in India, where a person is competent to testify according to the provisions of this section, but is unable owing to his tender age, to comprehend the nature of an oath or affirmation, s 13 of the Oaths Act relieves the Court of the necessity of administering an oath or affirmation to him; and the evidence of such a person recorded without oath or affirmation may be admitted. 10 O. C 337=7 Cr L. J. 89. See also 16 B. 359; 14 B L. R. 204 (F. B); 11 C. P. L R. Cr. 16; contra, 16 M. 105; 10 A. 207; 11 A. 183 Children are most un- 6. Evidence of eye- wife. A. I. How to ascertain competency.—By this section, the Legislature has not prescribed an inflexible rule of universal application to the effect that, before a child of tender years is questioned, the Court must by preliminary examination test his capacity to understand and to give rational answers and must form an opinion as to the competency of the witness before the actual examination commences 18 C. W. N. 147=41 C. 406; contra, 11 C. W. N. 51; 20 Bom. L R. 365. Understanding questions put and giving reasonable and comprehensive answers determine competency of witness. A. I. Tender years—There is no fixed period of legal discretion under which an infant is an incompetent witness. The rule by which an infant under seven years of n conclusively not to have of evidence (Perpetteson. . and the question is entl- the Court will ascertain its own satisfaction by examining the infant as regards his understanding. (P

A Court should ascertain first of all by some simple questions whether a child is competent to understand and answer questions. 1923 p 91.

Idiot—An idiot ... fore is by law presu ... able of giving evide ... onus of proving the unsoundness of mind of any person tendered as a witness rests on those who dispute his sanity. Harrod v. Harrod, 8 K. & J. at. p. 9, Powell, Ev. 213.

Deaf and Dumb.—Deaf and dumb persons were formerly regarded as idiots, and therefore incompetent to testify but the modern doctrine is that if they are of sufficient understanding they may give evidence either by signs or through an interpreter or in writing. (Powell, Ev. 214).

Explanation.—A lunatic is one ... or other accident has lost the use ... intelligence continues, the lunatic is ... restored during a lucid interval. Moreover, the disability does not extend to cases of monomania as to some immaterial matter, nor where the hallucination permits the witness to understand the nature of the duty which is expected from him (R. v. Hill, 2 Den. 254). But where a person is tendered as a witness who is believed to be suffering from monomania, a preliminary inquiry as to his capacity to give evidence must be instituted and he himself must be examined. (Powell, Ev. 214).

Dumb witness.

119. A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing or by signs; but such writing must be written and the signs made in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence.

Deaf and Dumb witnesses. The same rule would, no doubt, be applicable in the case of deaf and dumb witnesses, who might be communicated with by special signs, provided the Court was satisfied as to the reality and accuracy of such communication. Competence to understand the question put to him and to give rational answers is under section 118 the one essential qualification for a witness. Deaf and dumb persons were formerly excluded as witnesses on the presumption of their idiocy. It is now ascertained how groundless this presumption is. (Cunningham, 349). If the witness can write, it is safer practice to receive his testimony in this form, than through the medium of signs. Morrison v. Lennard, 3 C. and P. 127. Persons deaf and dumb from birth were formerly excluded and classed with idiots. Education has now opened their ears, and metaphorically loosened their tongues. (Norton, Ev. 306).

Deemed to be oral evidence—Presumably to exclude the effect of putting in writing which would give the opposite side the right of a reply. (Norton, Ev. 336).

Scope—The privilege given by this section is the privilege of the witness, i. e. of the Judge of whom the question is asked. Confidential communications with legal advisers.

Reason for the rule—Under the old law, (Act II of 1855), section 22, a party to a suit, who offered himself as witness, was bound to produce any confidential writing or correspondence that had passed between himself and his legal adviser The reason for this rule is not very clear ; and the present section abrogates it so far that such correspondence need be produced only if it is necessary to explain the witness's evidence. It will be observed that the doubts which were at one time felt in the English Courts as to whether the protection extends to communication made by a client to his solicitor before any dispute has arisen, cannot arise under this section (Taylor, 924), The English law at present is identical with the rule here laid down ; Minet v. Morgan L. R 8 Ch. App 361—(Cunningham, Ev. 362).

Scope.—Statements of witness recorded for the special purpose of being shown to a legal adviser with a view to ascertaining whether it is a good case for the Court to decide are privileged. 43 Ind Cas 71.

Production of title deeds of witness not a party.

130. No witness who is not a party to a suit shall be compelled to produce his title-deeds to any property or any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee or any document the production of which might tend to criminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce them with the person seeking the production of such deeds or some person through whom he claims.

the reason to be the mischief which might ensue from an erroneous decision of th Judge as to the nature of the documents. (Phipson, Ev. 179) A person who not a party to the action cannot be compelled to produce his title deeds, or documents referring to his title to any property. If one person wants to see another person's title deeds or documents he should himself bring an action against such person for discovery. Cockle Cas. 303 ; Pickering v. Wayes, 1 L. J. K. B. (O. S) 110. A mortgagee also cannot be compelled to produce his security including title deeds deposited with him except on payment of his principal and interest. Chichester v. Marquis of Donegall, L. R. 5 Ch. 502. A witness is not bound to produce any document which he swears will tend to criminate him. Roe v. New York Press, 75 L. J. 31.

Production of documents which another person, having possession could refuse to produce.

131. No one shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession, which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce if they were in his possession, unless such last mentioned person consents to their production.

Notes.—By section 65, secondary evidence can be given when a document is in the custody of a person who is legally bound to produce it and who refuses to do so. In the case, therefore, of a document protected under this or the preceding section, secondary evidence of its contents could not be given. (Cun. Ev 366).

Witness not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate.

132. A witness shall not be excused from answering any questions as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind :

Proviso.

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.

English law.—No man is bound to criminate himself ; nemo tenetur seipsum rodere. Hence, a witness, whether a party to a suit or not, cannot be compelled to answer any question, whether put viva voce or in the form of a written interrogatory, the answer to which may expose, or tend to expose him, to a criminal charge, penalty or forfeiture of any kind. If the witness, after claiming privilege, is compelled to answer, his evidence will not be admitted against him at a subsequent trial for the criminal offence. (R. v. Garbet 1 Den. 236). Powell, Ev. 222.

Scope—It seems that the Indian legislature while departing from the rule laid down in English cases have accepted the principle laid down in R. v. Garbet cited above. A witness has been made compellable to answer relevant questions but he is given the protection mentioned in that case. Where a person is charged with an offence with which he is alleged to have incriminated himself in his deposition in a case, the fact that he was the person who gave the deposition should be proved. 2 Weir 794.

The corroboration required of the testimony of an accomplice should go to some circumstances affecting the identity of the accused as participating in the transaction Such corroboration ought to be that which is derived from unimpeachable or independent evidence as distinguished from that derived from the earlier statements of the same accomplice or the statements of other accomplices. 6 Bom L R. 481. The amount of criminality is a matter for consideration, and when a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense, this evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of a person who is an actual perpetrator with the principal offender In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice the Court must exercise careful discrimination and consider all the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by those circumstances, or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by an alleged accomplice are supported in essential and material particulars by evidence aliundi as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice. 28. CHAPTER X.

Of the Examination of Witnesses.

135. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to civil and criminal procedure respectively, and, in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court.

Order of production and examination of witnesses.

Scope.—This section deals with the law which regulates the order in which witnesses are to be examined. Before the Court can proceed to hear a case, it is obviously necessary to determine which party shall begin, or upon whom the burden of proof on the whole case lies. The general rule is that the party who alleges any matter in issue must prove it. This would be simple enough if there were only one fact in issue, but there may be several facts in issue, the burden of proof of some being on one party and of others on the other party. The position is practically this, ... against whom judgment would be ...le Cas 123). The party who would ... to begin. In criminal cases there ... are invariably made by the prosecution and as such the prosecution has got the right to begin.

Civil Cases.—In civil ... dant admits the facts allege ... or on some additional facts ... entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to ...

... (Order XVIII, rule 2). Where there are several defendants some of whom support the case of the plaintiff, wholly or in part and others oppose him, the rule is that those who support the case of the plaintiff, must address the Court and adduce his evidence in the first place and then the other defendants must address the Court and adduce evidence. 32 B. 599

Criminal Cases.—In criminal cases, the prosecution has the right to begin. The witnesses for prosecution are examined in the first place. There are different kinds of procedure in different kinds of cases. Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code prescribes the procedure to be adopted in summons cases. Chapter XXI lays down the procedure to be adopted in warrant cases and Chapter XXII prescribes the procedure to be followed in summary trial. In all of them the prosecution witnesses are to be examined in the first place.

136. When either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be relevant; and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant and not otherwise.

Judge to decide as to admissibility of evidence.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact, and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Illustrations.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under section 32.

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement, before evidence is given of the statement.

(b) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost.

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced.

(c) A is accused of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen.

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property.

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property. The Court may, in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of possession to be proved before the property is identified.

(d) It is proposed to prove a fact (A) which is said to have been the cause or effect of a fact in issue. There are several intermediate facts (B, C and D) which must be shown to exist before the fact (A) can be regarded as the cause or effect of the fact in issue. The Court may either permit A to be proved before B, C and D is proved, or may require proof of B, C and D before permitting proof of A.

improper admission of evidence is extremely detrimental to the interest of the parties. So the Judge is authorised to decide the question of relevency of a fact by asking questions to the party tendering evidence.

Para 2—This para. should be read with s. 104. It often happens that an agent, for instance, to carry a message and bring back an answer, or do some other act, is put into the box before the agency or authority is proved. Thereupon an objection is taken by the opposing counsel that the evidence is not receivable, because the agency, etc. is not proved. An undertaking prove the agency will be forthcoming at a late If the proof of agency should break down, the agent is expunged from the Judge's notes. interrupt the witness in his story, and call another witness in the middle of his examination, to prove agency. It is to meet such a state of things that this clause is provided. (Norton, Ev. 319).

Para 3—Illustrations (c) and (d) explain the meaning of the para. Where the relevency of one fact depends upon another fact, which is not proved before the Court, the Court may either permit the first-mentioned fact to be proved before the second fact or may require the party to adduce evidence in the first place for proving the second fact.

Examination-in-chief.

137. The examination of a witness by the party who calls him shall be called his examination in-chief.

Cross-examination

The examination of a witness by the adverse party shall be called his cross examination.

The examination of a witness, subsequent to the cross-examination by the party who called him, shall be called his re examination.

138. Witnesses shall be first examined-in-chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re-examined.

Order of examinations.

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief.

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination ; and, if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross-examine upon that matter.

Direction of re-examination.

Principle.—Long forensic experience has evolved a body of rules of practice which undoubtedly tend to elicit the truth, and thus materially assist the tribunal in ascertaining the weight which should be attached to the evidence of any witness. (Powell, Ev 525).

Examination—The first rule which regulates examination-in-chief is this :—

s the practice, and tions favourable to Court, whether it tells in favour of the prisoner or not, and not unduly press for conviction. (Powell, Ev. 526).

"We may here observe that it is to an affirmative proof that an examination-in-chief is mainly addressed , and the proof is that of the issue to which the party producing the witness has by his pleadings in the cause challenged his antagonist ; and this consists in avoidance of all diverting, and collateral matters. The expression affirmative is used in the sense of something which is affirmed on either one side or the other. In this view a negation by a defendant of the case of the plai had averred their existence. It would extend even to inferences, in the nature of opinion, which the witness might himself draw from the facts before him. Testifying as to facts, the witness can of course only do so according to the extent of his knowledge or recollection He is not required to speak with such certainty as to exclude all doubt from his mind. "If" says Professor Greenleaf, "the fact is impressed on his memory but his recollection does not rise to positive assurance, it is still admissible, to be weighed by the jury ; but if the impression is not derived from the recollection of the fact, and is so slight as to render it probable that it may have been derived from others, or may have been some unwarrantable deduction of witness's own mind, it will be rejected." To use the expression of Mr. Taylor in modification of the passage—"He may express it as it lies in his memory." (Goodeve, Ev. 195). But there are exceptions to the rule, though they will be found limited to the instances where the nature of the case does not admit of more positive evidence. Thus, in a question of identity between persons and hand-writing, a witness is allowed to speak upon belief. So, in one requiring for aid in its determination, the experience to be derived from science, art or trade ; witness skilled, in such matters or as they are termed experts are admitted to give, as evidence, the results of their own craft bearing on the issue, as in questions of foreign law or usage skilled or competent persons are admitted it will not be excluded if the cross-examiner undertakes to show that it is really material. (Powell, Ev. pp. 531-533).

"Cross-examination, though very powerful, is also a very dangerous engine. It is a double-edged weapon, and as often wounds him who wields it, as him at whom it is aimed. To wield it to advantage requires great practice and natural tact. In the hands of the raw and inexperienced advocate, we frequently see it to do more injury than good to the cause. Yet it is this branch of forensic practice that the youthful advocate is most eager to display. The old and weary pleader remembers that the witness is hostile to him, and is, perhaps, on the watch to inflict damage on his cause Every question is likely to give such a witness an opportunity of clenching the nail he has driven before if it is not of starting new matter, which the examination-in-chief may not have elicited, but which may be further pursued in re-examination. Therefore unless there is some very good ground for believing that the witness can be broken down, or convicted of falsehood, it is rarely good policy to submit him to a severe cross-examination. Sometimes a cross-examination is little more than affectation, in order that the pleader may not seem to let the witness go without ques tion, as if able evidence it may be prudent for the adverse party not to cross-examine; for in such a case, he may be so doing, instead of weakening the evidence, merely strengthen and confirm it. So too, he will generally not cross-examine a witness, whose evidence he admits, or which possibly cannot injure his case. Reckless cross-examination, moreover, often lets in evidence which beforo was not admissible. (Powell, Ev. 531).

How long right to cross examin

cross-examination of the witness follow

concluded and the attendence of the witness is either dispensed with from the stand or the re-examination if any, has begun. After that it is a privilege only, resting in favour of the Court. The ordinary rules of procedure made to the end that the truth may be elicited by the expeditious as well as orderly examination of witnesses require that parties must exhaust their cross-examination of a witness when entered into. (Burr Jones, Ev. § 825).

Re-examination.—The object of re-examination is to explain the meaning of the expressions used by the witness in cross-examination. The re-examination is subject to the same rules as the examination-in-chief. No leading questions may be asked for the witness is the witness of the party who examined him in chief. As to the introduction of new matter, see the end of the section. The Court always may and often does, examine a witness at the close of the examination. The Court is not bound by the same rules as counsels as to leading questions etc. See post, section 142. The Court may put what questions it pleases, and in what form it pleases, see post section 145, and most usefully so, especially where the examination has not been scientifically or skilfully conducted (Norton, Ev. 323).

Cases—An accused person must be allowed to cross-examine witnesses called by another co-accused for his defence, if the case of the latter is adverse to that of the former. 21 C. 401; but see 12 W. R. Cr. 75 which was decided before this Act. But the view expressed in 21 C. 401 is in accordance with English law: vide Lord v. Colvin, (1855.) 24 L. J. Ch. 517; R. v. Burdett, Dears C. C 431. One defendant can also cross-examine another co-defendant's witness if his defence is adverse. 1 M H. C. R. 546. In criminal cases an accused has the right to cross-examine the prosecution witness when the charge is framed. If he waives that right he cannot afterwards claim that right. 7 C. 28=8 C. L. R. 328; 20 C. 469: contra, 2 A. 253; 32 C. 292 In the latter two cases it was laid down that the right continued till the end of the case. After a refusal of an application by the accused for re-summoning the prosecution witnesses for further cross examination, the accused applied for summoning some of those witnesses as witnesses on his behalf. On their appearing the Magistrate refused to allow the accused to cross-examine them, and the accused thereupon declined to examine them as his witnesses Held, that the refusal by the Court to allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses, who were in attendance in Court, has resulted in a mistrial of the case. 1 C. W. N. 19; see also 5 C. W. N. 447.

No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as to the right of counsel to demand in cross-examination that a witness should repeat the story which he has told in the examination-in chief. 85 P. L. R 1914=22 Ind. Cas. 724. A Magistrate is not entitled to refuse the application of the accused, made after the framing of the charge, to recall the witnesses for the prosecution, on the ground that they have already being cross-examined before the framing of the charge, in the understanding that they would not be required for further cross-examination after the charge. 6 C. W. N. 424, see 41 C. 299. Where a witness has not been asked a single question in examination-in-chief there even the opposite party has the right to cross-examine. 6 B. L. R. App. 88. In a criminal case it must be proved that either the accused cross-examined the prosecution witnesses or was given sufficient opportunity to cross-examine them. 19 B. 759; see also 9 W. R. 587; 6 W. R. 181; 12 C. L. J. 124. (F. B.). Generally it is not the province of the Court to examine witnesses and as a rule the Court should leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as it provided for in this section. 11 O. L. J. 333=82 Ind. Cas. 154 (1).

It certainly implied by this section that a party must have had an opportunity to cross-examine and does not mean that merely a right to cross-examine a witness without an opportunity being offered for cross-examination is sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law. 73 Ind. Cas. 339=24 Cr. L. J 595.

139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as witness.

Cross-examination of person called to produce a document

Scope.—It is the rule that, if a competent witness is intentionally called and sworn for the purpose of giving evidence, the right of cross-examination exists, although no testimony is actually given Rex v. Brooke, 2 Stark. 472; Phillips v. Eamer, 1 Esp. 355; 6 B. L. R. App 88. But there are certain exceptions to the general rule. The rule does, however, extend to a witness who is simply subpœnaed to produce a document to be identified or proved by another witness. In such a case he need not be sworn. Summers v. Moreley, 2 Cromp. and M. 477; Perry v. Gibson, 1 A. & E. 48; Rush v. Smith, 1 C. M. and R. 64; Davis v. Dole, 4 Car and P. 335; Griffith v. Ricketts, 7 Hare. 300; Reed v. James, 1 Stark. 1327.

Until he is called as a witness—i. e, until he is sworn intentionally. If he is unnecessarily sworn he cannot be cross-examined. (Rush v. Smith, 1 C. M. and R. 94); nor where he is sworn by mistake. (Wood v. Mackinson, 2 M. and R. 273; Clifford v. Hunter, 3 C. and P. 16; Reed v. James, 1 Stark. 1327).

140. Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.

Witnesses to character.

Scope.—According to English practice it is not usual to cross-examine, except under special circumstances, witnesses called merely to speak to the character of a prisoner, but there is no rule which forbids the cross-examination of such witnesses (Woodroffe, 863) The Indian rule is also the same as the use of the word "may" suggests that it is not the usual practice, though the right exists. (Norton, Ev. 325).

141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it wishes or expects to receive is called a leading question.

Leading questions.

Leading questions—"A question" says Bentham, "is a leading one, when it indicates to the witness the real or supposed fact which the examiner expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer. Is not your name so and so? Do you reside in such a place? Are you not in the service of such and such a person? Have you not lived so many years with him? It is clear that under this form every sort of information may be conveyed to the witness in disguise. It may be used to prepare him to give the desired anwers to the questions about to be put to him; the examiner, while he pretends ignorance and is asking for information, is in reality giving instead of receiving it." A leading question is one which suggests to the witness the answer desired, or which embodying a material fact, admits of a conclusive answer by a simple negative or affirmative. (Taylor, § 1404). "It is very clear that a question is leading which suggests to the witness the [illegible] is mouth words which he is to [illegible] suggesting an answer or a [illegible] declared that a question is [illegible] and admits of answer by [illegible] a question which may be [illegible] such questions which in no way suggest the answer desired and to which there is no real objection. On the other hand, leading questions are by no means limited to those which may be answered by yes or no (Burr Jones, § 816).

142. Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

When they must not be asked

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

Principle.—There is no rule of evidence more familiar to the practitioner than the one which forbids leading questions on direct examination of witness. Leading questions may be used to prepare a witness to give the desired answers to the questions about to be put to him ; the examiner, where he pretends ignorance as in asking for Scope.—Counsel when examining-in-chief must not ask leading questions. But the rule is not an inflexible one. In the first place, a question is not objectionable as leading when it is only introductory to what is material, or relates to matter as to which there is no dispute. In most cases it is necessary to prove a certain number position of the matters, leading er side, and such But when the real issue is approached the witness must be asked such questions merely as "what did you see ?" "What did you hear ?" "What happened next ?" This rule prevents at least in some measure, the possibility of any collusion between a prosecutor,

Judge, who has general discretion over the conduct of all viva voce examinations. For instance, when a question from its nature cannot be put except in a leading form, the Judge may allow it to be put. (Powell, Ev 528)

If objected to, etc.—If the objection is not taken at the time, the answer will be taken in the Judge's notes, and it will be too late to object to the evidence afterwards on the score of its having been elicited by a leading question. Sometimes the Judge himself will interfere to permit a leading question or a series of leading questions being put ; but it is the duty of the opposing counsel to take objection ; and it is only through want of practical skill that the omission occurs At the same time, it is to be observed that if evidence is elicited by a series of leading questions unobjected to, the effect of the evidence so obtained is very much weakened, for it can scarcely escape the notice of the Judge. It is advisable, therefore, for a counsel, examining-in-chief or on re-examination, not to put leading questions except of course as to those points on which they are expressly permitted by the Act. (Norton, Ev 325) counsel to say, whatever might be most favourable to him. This privilege of submitting leading questions on cross-examination is always, therefore, subject to the sound discretion of the Court. (Burr Jones, § 824). Thus, on Hardy's trial, a witness for the prosecution, on evincing a favourable disposition towards the prisoner, was asked a leading question by the counsel for the defence, but Buller J. refused to allow the question to be put, saying ;—"You may lead a witness upon a cross-examination to bring him directly to the point as to the answer ; but you can not go the length of putting into the witness's mouth the very words which he is to echo back again". *R. v. 144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant or other disposition of property, as to which he is giving evidence, was not contained in a document, and if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which, in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitled the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

Evidence as to matters in writing.

Explanation.—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.

Illustration.

The question is whether A assaulted B.

C deposes that he heard A say to D—"B wrote a letter accusing me of theft, and I will be revenged on him". This statement is relevant, as showing A's motive for the assault, and evidence may be given of it, though no other evidence is given about the letter

Scope.—This section merely points out the manner in which the provisions of sections 91 and 92 as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence may be enforced by the parties to the suit. "Documents which in the opinion of the Court ought to be produced" would of course include the cases referred to in section 91, where the law requires a matter to be reduced to the form of a document. (Cunningham, Ev. 376).

145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced into writing, and relevant to matters in question, without such writing being shown to him, or being proved ; but, if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him.

Principle. ... witness may be ... his previous written statements

is to impeach his veracity by contradicting his present statement with that supposed to have been made by him to some other person, common justice requires that before his credit is attacked, he should have an opportunity of declaring whether he ever made such statement to that person, and of explaining in the re-examination, the nature and particulars of the conversation, under what circumstances it was made, from what motives, and with what designs. The former account, given by him in conversation, may have been partially heard, or misunderstood, or partly forgotten, or intentionally misrepresented." Philips and Arnold, vol. II. p 505.

Scope.—There is hardly any more familiar practice in judicial procedure than that of impeaching witnesses by proof of their former statements which are inconsistent with their present testimony. Since such an attempt is a direct attack upon the tesimony of the witness, and may result in serious consequences, it is important that the practice should be so regular that the witness may have full oppotunity to admit, deny or explain any statement which is thus assailed. It has frequently been declared that, in order to designate sufficiently the circumstances of the statement, the witness should be asked as to the time, place and person involved in the contradiction Although the conduct of the witness as to matters having no connection with the case the witness on cross-examination, but concerning his actions, if they ie witness stand. Questions lawful in cross-examination.

146. When a witness is cross-examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referreed to, be asked any questions which tend—

(1) to test his veracity,

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or g his character, although the answer to indirectly to criminate him or might expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.

English law—This section differs from the law of England where a witness is still not bound to answer questions which criminate, or have a tendency to criminate the witness, but it is submitted that the Court has the right to exercise a discretion in such cases, and to refuse to compel such questions to be answered when the truth or the matter suggested would not in the opinion of the Court affect the credibility of the witness as to the matter to which he is required to testify." Steph. Ev. Art. 129.)

Scope—This does not mean that a witness may be asked questions on irrelevant topics for the mere purpose of contradicting him or of proving contradictory statements. For, unless they come within the exceptions mentioned in s 153, his answers to questions tending to shake his credit cannot be contradicted ; nor by section 155, can former contradictory statements be proved, unless that part of the witners's evidence, which they counteract, was itself liable to be contradicted. When witness to be compelled to answer.

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, provisions of section 131 shall apply thereto.

Scope—The word "such," it is presumed, refers to the last clause of the preceding section, and not to the word "any," in earlier part of that section. None but relevant questions can be asked in cross-examination ante. section 138, clause 2. But relevancy is of two-fold character; it may be directly relevant in its bearing on elucidating or disproving the very merits of the points in issue. In such a case, the witness is not prote [illegible]
of relevancy which is [illegible]
which is always relevant: because if he is dishonest no faith can be put in the story he utters. Where questions are put to a witness, not for proving or disproving the point in issue but exclusively and merely to show what is the character of the witness the Court is to decide whether the question is to be answered or not. (Norton, Ev 328)

Court to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer.

148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

(1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in t[illegible]
the imputation would not affect, [illegible]
the Court as to the credibility of [illegible]

(3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence;

(4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Scope.—Witnesses may be cross-examined as to specific facts though not pertinent to the issue which tend to discredit the witness or impeach his moral character and credit, when there is reason to believe that such examination will tend to the ends of justice; but that a cross-examination of this character ought not to be allowed when it seems unjust to the witness and uncalled for by the circumstances of the case. According to this view it may as a rule be safely left to the trial Judge to control the inquiry; while it is proper for him to permit questions tending to disgrace the witness, if in an important way this affects his credibility, yet, on the other [illegible] the trial Judge is to be exercised in view of the evidence already introduced and the testimony of the witness in the direct examination and all the circumstances of the case. It often happens that the appearance bias and deportment of an adverse witness—his prevarication, reluctance, or apparent bias, the intrinsic improbability of his testimony or its incongruity with known facts—make it the plain duty of the Court to permit searching and disparaging inquiries on matters irrelevant to the issue, for the purpose of aiding the jury in a collateral inquiry as to his credit (Burr Jones, § 834).

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds.

149. No such question as is referred to in section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well founded.

Illustrations.

(a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dakait. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dakait ; the informant, on being questioned by the pleader gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(c) A witness ... ndom whether he is a dakait.

(d) A witness ... ned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dakait

Reasonable Ground—"The illustrations show that the "reasonable grounds" which justify such questions, may be much slighter than could justify a man in making an imputation under other circumstances A barrister who is told a discrediting fact by an attorney or vakil, or a pleader who hears such a fact from a person who appears to know about it, is justified in so far assuming its truth as to question a witness about it ; and he may even do so with no other justification than the witness's unsatisfactory replies." (Cun Ev. 381).

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may, if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession.

151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous, although such questions or inquiries may have some bearing on the questions before the Court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.

If the cross-examination is proceeding ... test the accuracy and credibility of the witness, or is being needlessly protracted, or is being conducted in a manner which is unfair to the witness or if it is inconsistent with the decorum of the Court-room the Court is not bound to wait for objections from counsel, but may interfere of its own motion. Every Court having original jurisdiction is authorized to reject evidence on immaterial issues, though objected to by neither party ; and if it were otherwise, it would be a reproach to the administration of justice. (Burr Jones, § 817) "Justice to the witness demands that all the Courts to which he appeals for ... the circums- ... no concern, may be afterwards reverted by appellate tribunal." Great Western Trunkpike Road Co v. Loomis, 32 N. Y. 127. It is almost needless to add that cross-examination on matters either directly in issue or directly relevant to the issue is a matter of right, and its exclusion is error. It is only after right has been substantially and fairly exercised that the allowance of cross-examination becomes discretionary with the trial Court.

152. The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, though proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.

Questions intended to insult or annoy.

Object.—Counsels have no right to inject into the cross-examination unfair insinuations upon the conduct of the witness or comments upon his testimony, and Court should not wait for objections before interfering with such a practice. It goes without saying that questions tending to insult, abuse or intimidate the witness should not be permitted, and the Court is not required to wait for objections to such mode of interrogation. (Burr Jones, § 843.)

153. When a witness has been asked and has answered any question which is relevant to the inquiry only in so far as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him; but, if he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Exclusion of evidence to contradict answers to questions testing veracity.

Exception (1)—If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted of any crime and denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction

(2).—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted.

... that, but for such a rule a suit might easily digress into various collateral issues and become practically interminable. The exceptions refer to two matters which are easily susceptible of proof and strike at the very root of the witness's trustworthiness. It is very important to know whether a witness has been previously convicted, or has received a bribe from the other party On the other hand no great expenditure of time need be involved in ascertaining how the facts stand. (Cun. Ev. 383). Where a fact which has a direct bearing on the issue is denied by a witness, it may, of course, be proved aliunde. See illustration (c), but where the fact inquired after is collateral to the issue—as, for instance, the character of a witness,—counsel must be content with the answer which the witness choose to give him. If he denies the imputation, the answer is conclusive for purpose of the suit. See illustrations (a) (b) ; the matter cannot be carried further at the trial except the two cases provided for by this section. The only redress which a party has is to charge the witness with perjury and try him for it. To this rule there are however, two exceptions Exception (1)—When a witness denies that he has been previously convicted, his previous conviction may always be put in to refute him (Norton, Ev. 332) Exception (2)—This exception is based on Attorney General v. Hitchock, 16 L. J. Ex 259. Whether this can be done has been the subject of much doubt in England, In the above case. Pollock C B. observed . "A witness may be asked how he stands affected towards one of the parties ; and if his relation towards them is such as to prejudice his mind, and fill of a bribe by a witness to another, tends to show that he is not impartial."

154. The Court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

Question by party to his own witness

Principle—As a party cannot put leading questions to his own witness it is apparent that injustice would ensue if the party, discovering that he had been mistaken in his witness is that the witness was adverse and was against and not for him, were tied down by any hard-and-fast rule as to leading the witness. The rule is correctly indicated by Greenleaf when he says · "But the weight of authority seems in favour of admitting the party to show that the evidence has taken him by surprise, and is contrary to the examination of the witness preparatory to the trial, or to what the party had reason to believe he would testify, or that the witness has recently been brought under the influence of the other party and has deceived the party calling him. (Burr Jones, Ev. § 817).

In its discretion.—The unwillingness or other state of mind of the witness is to be decided by the Judge from his demeanour upon the stand and from such facts in evidence as may show that the witness, because of his relationship to a party, in the cause or for other reason, has some bias against the one calling him or some disinclination to testify. then this rule and the rule stions in examination-in-chief and may attack the character and dispute the veracity of the witness in fact, to cross-examine him. The foundation of the rule against leading questions is that the witness is favourable to the party who calls him ; and when that is not the case the reason for insisting on the rule is gone. The mere fact that a party is driv to call his opponent as his witness does not entitle him to treat that opponent as hostile and cross-examine him without the leave of the Court. Scot v. Sampson, Judge is satisfied that a witness is hostile to the application, declare him so to be; and this will ... eat him as a witness called by the other side. Price v. Manning, 42 Ch D. 372—Powell Ev. 529. 155. The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways by the adverse party, or, with the consent of the Court, by the party who calls him:—

Impeaching credit of witness.

(1) by the evidence of persons who testify, that they from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit;

(2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has "accepted" the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;

(3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted;

(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character.

Explanation—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

The offer of a bribe by witness to another, or the fact of a bribe having been accepted by him, tends to show that he is not impartial." This is an example of misconduct connected with the proceeding

Clause (3)—See illustrations (a) and (b). Any statement, verbal as well as written, may be used for this purpose. The witness must be specifically asked whether he made such and such statements, before he can be contradicted by them through another witness Where the statement is in writing , see ante, section 146, proviso (4). Norton, Ev. 334. Clause (4)—"On indictments for rape or an attempt to commit that crime, while evidence of general bad character is admissible to show that the prosecutrix, like any other witness, ought not to be believed upon her oath, proof that she is a reputed prostitute would go far towards raising an inference that she has yielded willingly to the prisoner's embraces General evidence, therefore, of this kind will be received, though the woman be not called as a witness, and though, if called she be not asked, on cross-examination, any questions tending to impeach her character for chastity". Norton, Ev. 334 , see also 36 C W N. 356=33 Cr L J. 604=A I. Questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant fact, admissible.

156. When a witness whom it is intended to corroborate gives evidence of any relevant fact, he may be questioned as to any other circumstances which he observed at or near to the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred, if the Court is of opinion that such circumstances, if proved, would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies.

Illustration

A, an accomplice, gives an account of a robbery in which he took part. He describes various incidents unconnected with the robbery which occurred on his way to and from the place where it was committed.

Independent evidence of these facts may be given in order to corroborate his evidence as to the robbery itself.

Corroborative evidence.—This is additional evidence proving similar facts or facts calculated to produce the same results as facts already given in evidence. The distinction between corroborative and cumulative evidence is clearly marked, although, ordinarily, corroborative evidence, simply means fortifying evidence, whether it is evidence of different or similar facts, or additional evidence of the same fact. (Burr Jones, § 86).

circumstances in the first instance from the witness himself, and for this the section makes provision (Cun. Ev. 388). This section, in effect, declares evidence of certain facts to be admissibe ; and if it had not been inserted the Judge would have had to determine the relevancy of these facts by reference to secs. 7 and 11, and he might perhaps have been influenced by the practice in England which has been against the admission of such evidence. (Markby, Ev 109, 110).

Former statements of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact.

157. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact may be proved.

English law.—Facts which tend to render more probable the truth of a witness's testimony on any material point are admissible in corroboration thereof, although otherwise irrelevant to the issue and although happening before the date of the fact to be corroborated. Wilcox v. Godfrey, 26 L. T. N. S 481. But facts which are not more consistent with the truth of such testimony than the reverse, are inadmissible Whenever the testimony of a witness is challenged by cross-examination or otherwise, corroboration thereof is allowable ; and in certain cases no verdict can be obtained without the production of such evidence. The corroborative facts and evidence must, however, be proved otherwise than by the testimony of the witness to be corroborated Formerly the fact that a witness had made a previous statement similar to his testimony in Court could always be proved to confirm his testimony. But afterwards the rule was changed, and such evidence is now generally inadmissible either on direct examination to confirm his testimony, or on re-examination to re-establish his credit when impeached by proof of a previous contradictory statement. (Phipson, Ev 149).

Scope.—Before corroborative evidence is admissible, the evidence sought to be corroboroted must have been given. 5 C W. N. XVI. A statement made by a witness to a chief constable can only be used under this section to corroborate the evidence of the first witness at the trial. Rat. Un. Cr. C. 508. The force of any corroboration by means of previous consistent statements must evidently depend upon the truth of the proposition that he who is consistent desires to be believed. 11 B. 158. Whenever any statement, relevant under section 32 or 33, is proved all matters may be proved either in order to contradict or to corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matter suggested.

What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under section 32 or 33.

Scope—The statements admissible under sections, 32 and 33 are exceptional cases and the evidence is only admitted from the improbability or great inconvenience of producing the authors of the statements It is only just therefore that all the same safeguards for veracity should be provided as if the authors of the statement were themselves before the Court, and subjected to oath and cross-examination. (Norton, Ev. 336). The present section has the effect of exposing any such statement, when admitted, so far as may be, to all the scrutiny and giving the advantage of all the corroboration, which it would have had on the cross-examination of the person making it. (Cun. Ev 390). See also 23 C 441

159. A witness may, while under examination, refresh his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterwards that the Court considers it likely that the transaction was at that time fresh in his memory.

Refreshing memory.

The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person, and read by the witness within the time aforesaid, if when he read it he knew it to be correct.

When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory.

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by reference to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court, refer to a copy of such document:

Provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason for the non-production of the original.

An expert may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises.

Principle—It is a well-settled and undisputed principle of the law of evidence fer to written or printed memo- of refreshing, assisting or stimu- facts about which he is testi- only to such facts as are within nt is not violated by permitting icated. Bentham has pointed [illegible] witness on the stand to consult notes or memoranda for the purpose of refreshing his memory. "On the one hand, what you want is a prompt and unpremeditated answer. If you allow him time to consult notes, you partly lose the advantage of that lively and quick examination which does not give bad faith time to think." On the other hand, if this assistance is denied, the witness will often be unable to give accurate and complete testimony, and the whole object of the judicial investigation may be defeated It is universally ces is by no means equal, and it to memoranda or writings in that very few witnesses would [illegible] quantities and sums, after a lapse of a few years, if they were not permitted to refer to papers and writings which they knew to be correct at the time they were made. (Burr Jones, Ev $ 874)

Cases.—The writing need not be admissible in evidence 8 C 211; 9 C 455. 16 C. P. L. R. 122. Under this section it is not necessary that the witness must be sure that what was reduced to writing by him is a correct record It is enough if, on reading it, the true facts are recalled to his memory If the words are not recalled to his memory, the notes may be admitted under s. 160, if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the notes. 5 M. Testimony to facts stated in document mentioned in section 159.

160. A witness may also testify to facts mentioned in any such documents as is mentioned in section 159, although he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document.

Illustration.

A book-keeper may testify to facts recorded by him in books regularly kept in the course of business, if he knows that the books were correctly kept, although he has forgotten the particular transactions entered.

Scope.—In order that a document may be used to refresh the memory, it is by no means necessary that the witness after having seen it should have any independent rocollection of the facts mentioned therein or connected therewith, but it will suffice if he remembers that he has seen the paper before, and that when he saw it. ... instances them- ... e of recognising ... randum or swear to the particular fact in question Thus where an agent who made a parol lease, and entered a memorandum of the terms in a book, states that he has no memory of the transaction save from the book, though on reading the entry he entertains no doubt that the fact really happened, it was held sufficient. Taylor § 1412. See 49 C 573. The question whether secondary evidence has in any given case been rightly admitted is one which is proper to be decided by the Judge of first instance and is treated as depending very much on his discretion. 5 Bom. Right of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory.

161. Any writing refered to under the provisions of the two last preceding sections must be produced and shown to the adverse party if he requires it : such party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness thereupon.

Scope.—In all cases where documents are used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of a witness, it is usual and reasonable,—and if the witness has no independent recollection of the fact, it is necessary that they should be produced at the trial and that the opposite counsel should have an opportunity of inspecting ... tion, he may have the benefit of the ... Neither is the adverse party bound ... e, merely because he has looked at ... ntries as have been previously referred to ; but if he goes further than this, and asks questions as to the parts of the memorandum, it seems, that he thereby makes it his own evidence. (Taylor § 1413). The grounds upon which the opposite party is permitted to inspect a writing are ; (1) to secure the full benefit of the witness's recollection as to the whole of the facts ; (2) to check the use of improper documents and (3) to compare his oral testimony with the written statement. The opposite party may look at the writing to see what kind of writing it is in order to check the use of improper document ; but it is doubtful whether he is entitled, except for his particular purpose, to question the witness as to other and independent matters contained in the same series of writing. 8 C. 739 (745).

Production of documents.

162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

Translation of documents.

If for such a purpose it s necessary to cause any document to be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the translator to keep the contents secret unless the document is to be given in evidence; and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code.

Comment.—If a person served with a subpoena admits that he has the documents required with him, he must produce them He may be asked what documents he has with him, and he is bound to answer the question without being sworn, and produce the documents. The witness produces the document to the Court and not to the parties, and the Court decides whether it is to be used or not. The wit be compelled by subpoena to produce documents which are not in his possession or under his control. (Powell, Ev. 653). If the Court decides to summon a Government official for the production of certain documents, it should only do so after careful consideration and once the summons had been issued production should ordinarily be insisted on if the party who obtained the summons so desires. 45 Ind. Cas 898.

Giving, as evidence, of document called for and produced on notice.

163. When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence if the party producing it requires him to do so.

Scope.—The production of papers upon notice does not make them evidence

Cases—57 Ind. Cas. 973

Using, as evidence, of document production of which was refused on notice

164. When a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court.

Illustration

A sues B on an agreement and gives B notice to produce it. At the trial A calls for the document and B refusses to produce it. A gives secondary evidence of its contents. B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A, or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped. He cannot do so.

Scope.—If a party, after a notice, declines to produce a document, when formally called upon to do so, he will not afterwards be allowed to change his mind; and therefore, if he once refuses, he cannot, when his opponent has proved a copy, and is about to have it read, produce the original, and object to its admissibility without the evidence of an attesting witness. Neither after such refusal, will he be permitted to put the document into the hands of his opponent's witness for the purpose of cross-examination, or to produce and prove it as part of his own case. (Taylor, § 1818) A party who, after notice, declines, to produce his document, cannot afterwards [illegible] rt of his own case; or put it in the hands [illegible] Ev. 341). Judge's power to put questions or order production.

165. The Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time of any witness, or of the parties about any fact relevant or irrelevant; and may order the production of any document or thing: and neither the parties nor their agents shall be entitled to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of the Court, to cross-examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any such question:

Provided that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant, and duly proved:

Provided also that this section shall not authorise any Judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document which such witness would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under sections 121 to 131, both inclusive, if the question were asked or the document were called for by the adverse party; nor shall the judge ask any question which it would be improper for any other person to ask under section 148 or 149; nor shall he dispense with primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

Scope.—The object of the questions which the Judge is here empowered to put is either to discover a relevant fact, or to obtain proper proof of it. There is accordingly no relaxation of the rules previously laid down as to relevancy. The section merely authorises questions, the object of which is to ascertain whether the case is or is not proved in accordance with this rule (Cun. Ev. 396); see also 57 M. 635=A. I. R. 1934 Mad. 199. Under this section, a Judge has power to ask any question he pleases about relevant facts, if he does so in order to discovor or obtain proper proof of relevant facts. 10 B. 185; see also, 11 B. H. RECEIVED THE G-G'S ASSENT ON THE 27TH MARCH, 1855.

An Act to provide compensation to families for loss occasioned by the death of a person caused by actionable wrong.

Preamble

WHEREAS no action or suit is now maintainable in any Court against a person who, by his wrongful act, neglect or default, may have caused the death of another person, and it is often times right and expedient that the wrong doer in such case should be answerable in damages for the injury so caused by him ; It is enacted as follows :—

Suit for compensation to the family of a person for loss occasioned to it by his death by actionable wrong.

1. Whenever the death of a person shall be caused by wrongful act, neglect or default, and the act, neglect or default, is such as would (if death had not ensued) have entitled the party injured to maintain an action and recover damages in respect thereof, the party who would have been liable if death had not ensued, shall be liable to an action or suit for damages, notwithstanding the death of the person injured, and although the death shall have been caused under such circumstances as amount in law to felony or other crime.

Income-tax and super-tax.

5. (1) Income-tax for the year beginning on the 1st day of April, 1935, shall be charged at the rates specified in Part I of the Second Schedule, increased in each case, except in the case of total incomes of less than two thousand rupees falling under heading A in the said Part, by one sixth of the amount of the rate.

(2) The rates of super tax of the year beginning on the 1st day of April, 1935, shall, for the purposes of section 55 of the Indian Income tax Act, 1922,‡ be those specified in Part II of the Second Schedule, increased in each case by one-sixth of the amount of the rate.

(4) For the purpose of assessing and collecting income-tax on total incomes of less than two thousand rupees the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922,‡ shall be deemed to be subject to the adaptations set out in Part III of the Second Schedule

(5) For the purpose of any assessment to be made for the year ending 31st March, 1936, the rate of income-tax applicable to such part of the total income of any person as is derived from salaries or from interest on securities paid in the year ending 31st March, 1935, shall be the previous year's rate, and for the purposes of refunds under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) of section 48 in respect of dividends declared in the year ending 31st March, 1935, or of payments made in the said year of salaries or of interest on securities, the rate applicable to the total income of the person claiming refund shall be the previous year's rate.

ance for a further period of one year with the following alterations :— income is Rs. 1,000 or upwards but is less than Rs 1,500 is reduced from 2 pies to 1⅓ pies ; (b) the rate of income-tax when the total income is Rs. 1,500 or upwards but less than Rs 2,000 is reduced from four pies to 2⅔ pies , and (c) the surcharges on income-tax and super-tax are reduced from one-fourth to one-sixth. As it is proposed to retain the tax on incomes of annum at a reduced rate, clause 5 (4) cedure for the assessment of such Legislature. Clause (5) of section 5 on securities should be finally taxed for the purposes of income-tax and not super-tax at the rates applicable to a total income of like amount which was in force at the time when the taxation at source on these incomes took place ; otherwise salary-earners, for example, will be able not only to secure the advantage of reduced rates during (1935-36), but also to obtain a refund of part of the tax which had been deducted from their salaries during (1934-35). It also makes a similar provision for purposes of refunds under sub-section (1) or sub section (3) of section 48 in respect of dividends delared in the year ending 31st March 1935, or of payments made in the said year of salaries or of interest on securities. These provisions form the counterpart of a concession that has been allowed from time to time in the past when rates of income tax were being enhanced.—Notes on Clauses.

Notes.—Under clauses 21 and 29, the words "Government established by law in British India or the administration of justice in British India" do not apply only to the Supreme Government of India, but are equally applicable to Local Governments such as the Government of the N. W. Frontier Provinces. 18 Ind. Cas 347. The word "Government" does not include British Government. The expression "includes" and "shall include" is used in interpretation clauses in two senses. The ordinary and general sense in which it is used is to enlarge the meaning of the words or phrases occurring in the body of the statute, and when it is so used, these words or phrases must be construed as comprehending not only such things as they signify as their natural import, but also those things which the interpretation clause declares that they shall include. It is also susceptible of another construction which may become imperative, if the content of the act is sufficient to show that it was not merely employed for the purpose of adding to the natural significance of the word or expression defined. It may be equivalent to "mean and include" and in that case it may afford an exhaustive explanation of the meaning which for the purposes of the Act must invariably be attached to those words or expression. The expression in S. 3, clauses 21 and 40 is used in the restricted sense as equivalent to mean and include. A. I. R. 1934 Sind 96=28 S. L. R. 27=1934 Cr. C. 821.

General Rule of Construction

Coming into operation of enactment

5. (1) Where any Act of the Governor General in Council is not expressed to come into operation on a particular day, then it shall come into operation on the day on which it receives the assent of the Governor-General.

(2) ‡ Where any Act of the Governor-General in Council is reserved, under section 63 of the Goverment of India Act, 1915, for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon, then, if no later date is expressed, it shall come into operation, if assented to, by His Majesty, on the day on which that assent is duly notified.

(3) § Unless the contrary is expressed, an Act of the Governor General in Council or Regulation shall be construed as coming into operation immediately on the expiration of the day preceding its commencement.

Notes—A Statute takes effect from the first moment of the day on which it is passed, unless another be expressly named, in which case it comes into operation immediately on the expiration of the previous day. But where a particular day is named for its commencement, but the Royal assent is not given till a later day, the Act comes into operation only on the later day. Burn v. Carvalho, (1834) 4 New. & M. 893; Maxwell, pp. 739, 740.

5. (1) It shall be lawful for His Majesty, if an address in that behalf has been presented to him by each House of Parliament and if the condition hereinafter mentioned is satisfied, to declare by Proclamation that as from the day therein appointed there shall be united in a Federation under the Crown, by the name of the Federation of India,—

Provided that after the establishment of the Federation, if any Instrument has in fact been accepted by His Majesty, the validity of that Instrument or of any of its provisions shall not be called in question and the provisions of this Act shall, in relation to the State, have effect subject to the provisions of the Instrument.

(6) An Instrument of Accession or supplementary Instrument shall not be valid unless it is executed by the Ruler himself, but, subject as aforesaid, references in this Act to the Ruler of a State include references to any persons for the time being exercising the powers of the ruler of the State whether by reason of the Ruler's minority or for any other reason.

THE GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT, 1890.

RECEIVED THE G.-G'S ASSENT ON THE 21ST MARCH, 1890.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Guardian and Ward.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, and amend the law relating to guardian and ward; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Consolidate and amend the . . were in force were Act XL of 1858 (Bengal Minor . mbay Minors Act). The only difference between . the former is imperative whilst Act VIII of 1890 is permissive. Under the old Act no person was entitled to institute or defend any suit connected with the estate of a minor unless he had obtained a certificate or unless the estate was of small value. Under the present Act, the Court has the power of appointing a next friend or guardian for any suit for or against a minor, but it is not necessary that the person so appointed should be a guardian under the Act. 19 C. 301. A person appointed a guardian by a Will need not take out probate, in order to obtain a certificate of guardianship under the Act. 19 B. 832. A guardian cannot be appointed to the property of a minor coparcener, having no separate property. 19 B. 309 (F. B.). It is open to a father to institute a regular suit for recovering the custody of his children The Guardians and Wards Act nowhere lays down that his only remedy is an application under the Act. 3 Bom. L. R 167=25 B 574; see also 1 C. P. L. R 135. The jurisdiction of the Court conferred by the Act cannot be ousted by any agreement inter partes. 4 Bom. L. R. 963. CHAPTER II.

Appointment and Declaration of Guardians.

Power of parents to appoint in case of European British subjects.

5. (1) Where a minor is a European British subject, a guardian or guardians of his person or property, or both, may be appointed, by Will or other instrument to take effect on the death of the person appointing,—

(a) by the father of the minor, or,

(b) if the father is dead or incapable of acting, by the mother.

(2) Where guardians have been appointed under sub section (1) by both parents, they shall act jointly.

Notes.—"This section follows Act XIII of 1874, which in recognizing in certain circumstances the right of mother to appoint guardian was based on the New York Civil Code. The section goes beyond section 47 of the Indian Succession Act (=s. 60 of Act XXXIX of 1925), and beyond the English law. But under the

* Substituted by Act IV of 1926.

English law, an appointment by a mother is not now wholly ineffectual, and is likely at no distant date to be declared to be valid except in as far as it may interfere with an appointment by the father."—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Father.—"By the law of England" said Lord Esher in the case of In re Agar Ellis 29 Ch D. 317, "the father has the control over the person, education and conduct of his children until they are twenty one." "The Court of Chancery" said Vice Chancellor Bacon, in Re Plomby, 47 T. L. R 28; "has no right to interfere with the sacred right of a father over his own children." A minor father can appoint a guardian by Will. Vide s. 60 of the Succession Act.

Mother.—In the case of In re A & B (Infants), (1897) 1 Ch. 786, it was held that the Court had full jurisdiction to override entirely the common law rights of the father in the interest of the mother. By section 3(1) of the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict, c. 27) the mother herself may by, deed or Will appoint any person to be guardian after her death So by English law not only a father but a mother also under certain circumstances can appoint a guardian or guardians of his child during minority if he is not married at that time. Atherly Jones Law of Children, pp 93-97 Before the passing of the Act, a mother even if a widow [illegible] Edwards, 3 Atk. 517 ; Blake v. Blake, [illegible] 2 P. Illegitimate Children.—A father has no legal power to appoint a testamentary guardian of his illegitimate children. Sleeman v. Wilson, 13 Eq. 36 ; Re. Ulee, 53 L T. 711 ; 54 L. T. 286. As to the rights of the mother of an illegitimate children, vide Reg, v. Nash, 10 Q B D. 454.
Burnards v. McHugh (1891), 1 Q. B. 194 : (1891) A. C. 388 : 54 L. T. 286.

Attestation by guardian—An instrument appointing a testamentary guardian is valid though attested by the guardian. In Bonis Parnell, 2 P. & D 379.

How guardians are appointed.—No precise words are necessary to appoint a testamentary guardian. Thus it is sufficient to direct that the children are to be brought up under the care and direction of a certain person, or that he is to have the management and care of the house and children or that he is to take care to see the child educated. Theobold, p. 98 citing Bridges v. Habses, Mosley, 109 , Miller v. Harris, 14 Sim. 540 ; Lady Tyaham v. Lennard, 4 B P. C. 302 ; see also 21 C. W. N. 1134 ; 21 C. 206 ; Mendes v. Mendes, (1747) 1 Ves Sen. 89.

Saving of power to appoint in other cases.

6 In the case of a minor who is not an European British subject, nothing in this Act shall be construed to take away or derogate from any power to appoint a guardian of his person or property, or both, which is valid by the law to which the minor is subject.

Under Hindu law a man has no power to appoint a guardian of his minor nephew, and any provision in a Will made by a Hindu testator appointing a guardian of his nephew is not binding on Courts under s. 7 (3). 220 P. L. R. 1911,

Power of the Court to make order as to guardianship

7. Where the Court is satisfied that it is for the welfare of a minor that an order should be made—

(a) appointing a guardian of his person or property, or both or,
(b) declaring a person to be such a guardian,

the Court may make an order accordingly.

(2) An order under this section shall imply the removal of any guardian who has not been appointed by Will or other instrument, or appointed or declared by the Court.

(3) Where a guardian has been appointed by Will or other instrument, or appointed or declared by the Court, an order under this section appointing or declaring another person to be guardian in his stead shall not be made until the powers of the guardian appointed or declared as aforesaid have ceased under the provisions of this Act.

Welfare of the Minor—In considering whether an order should be made appointing a guardian for a minor, the welfare of the minor is the paramount consideration in the case. Where a Court is satisfied that it is for the welfare of the minor that a guardian should be appointed, an order of appointment should be made. If the Court is not so satisfied the order cannot be made 11 Ind. Cas 478=231 P. L. R. 1911=196 P. W. R. 1911; see also, 42 C. 953; 18 C W. N. 160, 16 Ind. Clauses (a) and (b)—This section makes a distinction between appointing a guardian and declaring a person to be one. Order appointing a guardian.—So far as the infant is concerned he is put in the position of a ward as soon as the Court has made up its mind as to the matters set out in cls (a) and (b); and the proviso that the guardian should give security is merely an additional precaution to protect the interest of the infant. The effect of the order requiring security is to suspend the act of the guardian till he gives security. CHAPTER III.

Duties, Rights and liabilities of guardians.

General.

Fiduciary relation of guardian to ward.

20. (1) A guardian stands in a fiduciary relation to his ward and, save as provided by the Will or other instrument, if any, by which he was appointed, or by this Act, he must not make any profit out of his office.

(2) . . ds to and affects purchases . . : . .he ward of the property . . has ceased to be a minor, and generally all transactions between them while the influence of the guardian still lasts or is recent.

Notes—"This section lays down certain general propositions based on the fact that guardianship is a trust, and that the relationship between guardian and ward is one uberrima fidei, not only while it lasts, but even after it has ceased to exist"—Statement of Objects and Reasons. See also 30 B 591; 54 Ind. Capacity of minors to act as guardians.

Remunaration of guardian.

22. A guardian appointed or declared by the Courts shall be entitled to such allowance, if any, as the Court thinks fit for his care and pains in the execution of his duties.

(2) When an officer of the Government, as such officer, is so appointed or declared to be guardian, such fees shall be paid to the Government out of the property of the ward as the Local Government, by general or special order, directs.

Notes.—This section gives discretion to the Judge in the matter of allowing allowance and as such no appeal lies against his order. 24 B 95=1 Bom. L. R. 547; see also 48 P. R. 1901; 78 Ind. Cas. 108=A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 260.

Control of Collector, as guardian

23. A Collector appointed or declared by the Court to be guardian of the person or property or both, of a minor shall, in all matters connected with the guardianship of his ward, be subject to the control of the Local Government, or of such authority as that Government, by notification in the official Gazette, appoints in this behalf.

Notes.—Where the Collector is authorised by the Board of Revenue, as Court of Wards, to raise a loan on mortgage of the ward's properties, he can delegate his powers to the manager acting under him. The maxim "delegatus non potes delegare" is to be understood with this necessary qualification that in any particular case, if no authority to delegate has been given such authority may be implied from circumstances of the case. 3 C. L. J. 165. A collector appointed by the Court as guardian of the property of a minor has got special powers under this section and section 29 which limits the power of a guardian does not apply to a Collector. 96 Ind. Cas. 17=28 Bom. L. R. 628.

Guardian of the Person.

Duties of guardian of the person.

24. A guardian of the person of a ward is charged with the custody of the ward, and must look to his support, health, and education, and such other matters as the law to which the ward is subject requires.

Custody.—A guardian is entitled to the custody and control of his ward R. v. Johnson, (1724) 8 Mod Rep. 214, Flemming v Pratt. (1835) 1 L J. 194; R v. Isely 5 Ad & El. 441; Re Andrews, (1873) L. R 8 B. 153

Education.—A power to apply income for the maintenance and support of an infant authorises its application for his education *Per Jessel M. Title of guardian to custody of ward.

25. (1) If a ward leaves or is removed from the custody of a guardian of his person, the Court, if it is of opinion that it will be for the welfare of the ward to return to the custody of his guardian, may make an order for his return, and for the purpose of enforcing the order may cause the ward to be arrested and to be delivered into the custody of the guardian.

(2) For the purpose of arresting the ward, the Court may exercise the power conferred on a Magistrate of the first class by section 100 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882.*

(3) The residence of a ward against the will of his guardian with a person who is not his guardian does not of itself terminate the guardianship.

Practice with respect to permitting transfers under section 29.

31. (1) Permission to the guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in section 29 shall not be granted by the Court except in case of necessity or for an evident advantage to the ward.

(2) The order granting the permission shall recite the necessity or advantage, as the case may be, describe the property with respect to which the act permitted is to be done, and specify such conditions, if any, as the Court may see fit to attach to the permission; and it shall be recorded, dated and signed [illegible] own hand, or when from any cause [illegible]r with his own hand, shall be taken [illegible]e dated and signed by him.

(3) The Court may in its discretion attach to the permission the following among other conditions, namely:—

(a) that a sale shall not be completed without the sanction of the Court,

(b) that a sale shall be made to the highest bidder by public auction, before the Court or some person specially appointed by the Court for that purpose, at a time and place to be specified by the Court, after such proclamation of the intended sale as the Court, subject to any rules made under this Act by the High Court, direct,

(c) that a lease shall not be made in consideration of a premium or shall be made for such term of years and subject to such rents and covenants, as the Court directs;

(d) that the whole or any part of the proceeds of the act permitted shall be paid into the Court by the guardian, to the disbursed therefrom or to be invested by the Court on prescribed securities, or to be otherwise disposed of as the Court directs.

(4) Before granting permission to a guardian to do an act mentioned in section 29, the Court may cause notice of the application for the permission to be given to any relative or friend of the ward who should, in its opinion, receive notice thereof, and shall hear and record thes tatement of any person who appears in opposition to the application.

Sub section (1)—In all cases where sanction is given for the raising of loans on the security of the property of minors, it is the duty of the Judge granting sanction to specify in his order of sanction not only the amount to be raised and the property to be mortgaged, but also the rate of interest at which the loans are to be raised. If nothing is said as to the rate of interest the lenders are entitled only to a reasonable rate of interest, on the money advanced. 30A 188=5 A. L. J. 260 ; 11 C. 379 P. C. ; 21 C. W. Sub-section (4).—The words "any person" in the last para of this sub-section are not restricted in their application to the relations and friends of the minor. It is the duty of a Court to hear any person interested in an application made on behalf of the minor, even though he is not the minor's friend or relative. 10 M. L. T. 259=2 M. W. Variation of powers of guardian of property appointed or declared by the Court.

32. Where a guardian of the property of a ward has been appointed or declared by the Court and such guardian is not the Collector, the Court may, from time to time, by order, define, restrict or extend his powers with respect to the property of the ward in such manner and to such extent as it may consider to be for the advantage of the ward and consistent with the law to which the ward is subject.

Notes—A District Judge has no jurisdiction to dispossess third persons from the property over which they may be rightly or wrongly in possession, but can at best give directions to guardian to take necessary steps to recover the property. 47A. 313=23 A L. J. 28=85 Ind. Cas. 1047=A. I. R. 1925 All. 277.

Right of guardian so appointed or declared to apply to the Court for opinion in management of property of ward.

33. (1) A guardian appointed or declared by the Court may apply by petition to the Court which appointed or declared him for its opinion, advice or direction on any present question respecting the management or administration of the property of his ward.

(2) If the Court considers the question to be proper for summary disposal, it shall cause a copy of the petition to be served on, and the hearing thereof may be attended by, such of the persons interested in the application as the Court hinks fit.

(3) The guardian stating in good faith the facts in the petition and acting upon the opinion, advice or direction given by the Court shall be deemed, so far as regards his own responsibility, to have performed his duty as guardian in the subject-matter of the application.

Notes.—By sanction of Court only statutory presumption of faithful performance is raised. 141 Ind. Cas 492=34 Bom. L. R. 996=A. I. R. 1932 Bom. 460; See also A. I. R 1934 All. 1043.

Obligations on guardian of property, appointed or declared by the Court.

34. Where a guardian of the property of a ward has been appointed or declared by the Court and such guardian is not the Collector, he shall,—

(a) if so required by the Court, give a bond, as nearly as may be in the prescribed form, to the Judge of the Court to enure for the benefit of the Judge for the time being, with or without sureties, as may be prescribed, engaging duly to account for what he may receive in respect of the property of the ward;

(b) if so required by the Court, deliver to the Court, within six months from the date of his appointment or declaration by the Court or within such other time as the Court directs, a statement of the immovable property belonging to the ward, of the money and other movable property which he has received on behalf of the ward up to the date of delivering the statement, and of the dates due on that date to or from the ward;

(c) if so required by the Court, exhibit his accounts in the Court at such times and in such form as the Court from time to time directs;

(d) if so required by the Court, pay into the Court at such time as the Court directs the balance due from him on those accounts, or so much thereof as the Court directs; and Scope—The object of this section is to give the Court, as representing the interest of the minor, certain summary powers for the protection of his property. As soon as the ward becomes sui juris, the necessity for the power conferred on the Court by the section ceases He can sue his guardian for an account and can ratify expenditure or dispense with accounts as he thinks fit. 5 C. THE HINDU GAINS OF LEARNING ACT, 1930.

ACT NO XXX OF 1930

RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 25TH JULY, 1930.

An Act to remove doubt as to the rights of a member of a Hindu undivided family in property acquired by him by means of his learning.

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove doubt and to provide an uniform rule as to the rights of a member of a Hindu undivided family in property acquired by him by means of his learning;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Gains of Learning Act, 1930.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India.

* Substituted by Act XXI of 1929. † Act IV of 1882.

Notes.—'This Bill reproduces what, it is submitted, is the true rule of the Hindu Law in the matter of individual and personal earning by the member of a joint family. It derives support from the equitable and liberal spirit which pervades the utterances of the Smriti writers (with almost a solitary exception) on the subject-matter of this Bill and which forms quite a contrast to the narrow views of the latter-day commentators and the decisions based thereon. The opinion of many eminent British Indian Judges, including their lordships of the Privy Council, who have approached the subject without prepossession, is distinctly in favour of the

investment in landed property,

"An important result of the proposed Bill will be that it will immensely improve the position of the female members of a Hindu family. The widow and the daughter of the acquirer, often left helpless, will, in the absence of male issue, take by inheritance the deceased's gains of learning, in preference to distant male members who can, under the present law, lay claim to the same by survivorship.

"The present rule is archaic. It is based upon a misconception of the true spirit of the Hindu Law and has, in modern conditions of Hindu Society, the effect of stagnation. It breeds most wasteful litigation, as is obvious to any one, who has even a cursory acquaintance with reported Indian decisions or the daily cause lists of judicial tribunals. It is necessary that the original doctrine should be revived, which will set the spirit of private enterprise and individual exertion once more free from the trammels imposed in later times.

"The Bill aims at laying down the times and in terms free from ambig and doubt which hang round the q existing law which it seeks to intro learning on the same footing as those of ordinary education. There are cogent reasons, in modern conditions of life for the adoption of such a course. Any other plan must result in impracticable and fanciful distinctions and anomalies. To refer only to one case which is fruitful source of harassing litigation. The issue is comparatively clear as to cases where the education imparted at the expense of the family fund is a purely elementary one. (Lakshman v Jamnabai, 6 B. 225). It is equally clear where such instruction is in a special branch of education for instance, training for the I. C. S. (Gokul Chand. v. Hukum Chand. L. R. 48 I. A. p. 162) But the issue is not clear in cases which fall neither is the one nor in the other category.

acquisition itself was made with the aid of family funds, it was divisible among the siderable fluctuations. At first it was held that the gains of an ordinary general education at all events the ordinary gains of such education, were partible; if the education was imparted at the family expense or was received by a person in the enjoyment of a family maintenance. Latterly, however, the tendency of the Courts has been in favour of the opposite view, viz., that the gains of education imparted at the expense of the family are divisible only when the education is in a special branch of the science which is the source of acquisition and not the elementary or general education which is the necessary stepping stone to the acquisition of all science. The view taken by the Courts at the present time is opposed to the ancient texts, and is based upon distinctions of an unworkable character which have caused great uncertainty and confusion in their practical application They place one class of earnings at a great disadvantage. The large means of merely of an ordinary or separate property but the comparaich acquires property by means of a must divide its gains with the other ifficulty in working out the distinction drawn between the two classes of cases. What is special or scientific education and what is ordinary or general education is a matter which it is extremely difficult to determine. The standard of education varies in different localities, in different classes and in different families. It is also shifting from time to time. What might at one time have been regarded as extraordinary education becomes ordinary education after the lapse of some years. What might be ordinary education in the case of a wealthy family would be extraordinary education in a family of scanty mea

"The question did not assume any great importance till modern times, for self-acquisitions were comparatively rare Under the old conditions of life, when the members of a family all lived together in the same place and followed the same occupation there was seldom any scope for such acquisition. But under the altered conditions of present day life when the joint family is constantly splitting up and the members leave their ancestral home for different places to seek their living by new pursuits, not merely is the strengh of the family tie considerably loosened but the amount of the acquisitions of the individual members is, in the main, determined by the capacity, character and special ap itude of the individual.

"It can not be denied that the consequences of the present law are unfair to the acquirer and his widow and female issue So long as he remains an undivided member of the family, the other members have an equal share in his earnings during his life time, and the acquirer cannot make a gift, inter vivos or after his death, out of his acquisitions even to his own daughter or widow, in order to redress the inequalities of the Hindu Law of Intestate Succession The idle members of

The trader earns a large fortune which the present law allows him to keep to himself because his education in England was for the Civil Service and not for trade. But out of the earnings of the Civilian two shares are claimed, one by the trader and the other by the brother who has been idle. The trader keeps his own earnings and also takes a share of the Civilian's earnings. Ages ago, it was laid down by the Smritis, and it is still the law, that an educated member of the family is entitled to demand a partition at any time and his share is not liable to be debited with even a farthing of the cost of his education, however high it may have been Nor can the member who has made the outlay compel the member, educated at his expense, to earn or to save or even to postpone his demand for partition, and it is perfectly true to assert that a member of the family who spends money for another's education has no legal right to any return of the outlay. His expectation of benefit, if any, is a mere moral expectation, and it is neither necessary nor feasible to clothe it with legal sanction without violating the most deep-rooted principles of the Hindu Law.'

Though they have had the same start in life the degree of success attained by them may vary according to the differences of aptitude, character and other advantages, natural or accidental. Is there any reason in this case why the more successful brother should be compelled to share his earnings with his less able brothers? It is not suggested here that the claim of a brother to support and assistance should not be recognised by his more fortunate brother, but the claim should rest upon purely moral sanctions and should not be invested with any legal recognition. Knowing as we all do the great intensity of family ties among Hindus, it would be absurd to contend that, if legal obligations were removed, the moral obligation would cease to be recognised even to the extent to which it prevails among non-Hindu races.

THE HINDU INHERITANCE (REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES) ACT, 1928.

ACT NO. XII OF 1928.

RECEIVED THE ASSENT OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 20TH SEPTEMBER, 1928.

An Act to amend the Hindu Law relating to exclusion from inheritance of certain classes of heirs, and to remove certain doubts.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Hindu Law relating to exclusion from inheritance of certain classes of heirs, and to remove certain doubts; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

upon a different footing The bill is intended to remove from the law its obsolete and spent provisions in which there is now no parallel elsewhere. They disfigure that law and make it harsh and unjust."—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Short title, extent and application.

1. This Act may be called the Hindu Inheritance (Removal of Disabilities) Act 1928.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

(3) It shall not apply to any person governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu law.

Notes.—This Act makes the decision of Ram v. Lalla, 8 C. 149; Ram v. Ram, 8 C 919 and Vithel v. Woman, 68 Ind Cas. 111; Ram v. Bhani, 38 A. 127 obsolete. It also qualifies the decision of the Madras High Court reported in 43 M. 464=38 M. L. J 291, where the Court came to the conclusion that the right comes into existence at birth, subsists all through, although it is incapable of enforcement at the time of partition, because of the disqualification then existing. Now it can be enforced at the time of partition by the committee or guardian of the lunatic if the lunacy is not congenital. It affirms the decision of the Allahabad High Court in 28A 247.

Dayabhaga School.—In Bengal insanity need not be congenital nor incurable in order to exclude a person from inheritance. Wooma v. Girish, 10 C. 639.

2 Notwithstanding any rule of Hindu Law or custom to the contrary, no person governed by the Hindu Law, other than a person who is and has been from birth a lunatic or idiot, shall be excluded from inheritance or from any right or share in joint family property by reason only of any disease, deformity, or physical or mental defect.

Notes—Subsequent insanity does not divest a co parcener of the interest vested in heir by birth. 28 A. 247 Blindness, lameness, impotency and other defects must Saving and exception.

3. Nothing contained in this Act shall affect any right which has accrued or any liability which has been incurred before the commencement thereof, or shall be deemed to confer upon any person any right in respect of any religious office or service or of the management of any religious or charitable trust which he would not have had if this Act had not been passed.

Notes.—This section lays down that vested right shall not be divested by the virtue of this Act.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Hindu Law of Inheritance (Amendment) Act, 1929.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas, but it applies only to persons who, but for the passing of this Act, would have been subject to the law of Mitakshara in respect of the provisions herein enacted, and it applies to such persons in respect only of the property of males not held in coparcenary and not disposed of by Will.

Notes—This Act is intended to remove a sex disqualification which under the Order of succession of certain heirs.

2. A son's daughter, daughter's daughter, sister, and sister's son shall, in the order so specified, be entitled to rank in the order of succession next after a father's father and before a father's brother :

Provided that a sister's son shall not include a son adopted after the sister's death.

Notes —This section is intended to include the son's daughter daughter's daughter, and the sister amongst heritable bandhus which they are not under the Hindu law and improves the position of the sister's son by placing him immediately after the grand-father but before the grand uncle. This does not exhaust a very large number of female relations, e. g, the son's son's daughter, the brother's daughter, the sister's daughter who still remain outside the pale of heritable *bandhus. THE HINDU WIDOWS RE-MARRIAGE ACT, 1856.

ACT NO XV OF 1856.

RECEIVED THE G.-G.'S. ASSENT ON THE 25TH JULY, 1856.

An Act to remove all legal obstacles to the marriage of Hindu Widows.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is known that, by the law as administered in the Civil Courts established in the territories in the possession and under the government of the East India Company, Hindu widows, with certain exceptions are held to be, by reason of their having been once married, incapable of contracting a second valid marriage, and the offspring of such widows by any second marriage are held to be illegitimate and incapable of inheriting property ;

and whereas many Hindus believe that this imputed legal incapacity, although it is in accordance with established custom, is not in accordance with a true interpretation of the precepts of their religion, and desire that the civil law administered by the Courts of Justice shall no longer prevent those Hindus who may be so minded from adopting a different custom, in accordance with the dictates of their own conscience; and whereas it is just to relieve all such Hindus from this legal incapacity of which they complain; and the removal of all legal obstacles to the marriage of Hindu widows will tend to the promotion of good morals and to the public welfare; It is hereby enacted as follows—

Note.—14 W. R. O. J. 23.

Marriage of Hindu widows legalized.

1. No marriage contracted between Hindus shall be invalid, and the issue of no such marriage shall be illegitimate, by reason of the woman having been previously married or betrothed to another person who was dead at the time of such marriage, any custom and any interpretation of Hindu law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Rights of widow in deceased husband's property to cease on her re-marriage

2. All rights and interests which any widow may have in her deceased husband's property by way of maintenance, or by inheritance to her husband or to his lineal successors, or by virtue of any Will or testamentary disposition conferring upon her without express permission to remarry only a limited interest in such property, with no power of alienating the same, shall upon her remarriage, cease and determine as if she had then died; and the next heirs of her deceased husband, or other persons entitled to the property on her death, shall thereupon succeed to the same.

Notes.—A Hindu widow after remarriage forfeits her right in her deceased husband's estate although there is a custom of remarriage in her caste. 14 C. W. N. 345=5 Ind. Cas. 710; 33 B. 32; 22 A. 321; 22 C 589; 1 M 226; 15 Ind. Cas 602; 21 C W. N. 906, but see 7 A L J 417; 31 A. 161; 29 P. L. R. 1901; 29 A. 122. According to Allahabad H C. she also does not lose her right of maintenance by remarriage where such marriages are allowed by custom. 31 A. 161. See also 28 Ind. Cas 399; 32 Ind Cas. 338; 24 Ind Cas 691, A. I R. 1931 Oudh 107=121 Ind. Cas. 899=5 Luck 689; 32 P. L. R. 108=A I R. 1931 Lah 103; A. I. R. 1932 All 617 (F. B)=1932 A. L J. 941=140 Ind. Cas. 631. She is not only divested of all her estate thus inherited but also thereafter becomes incapable of inheriting any property which but for such remarriage she would have inherited from a lineal successor 1 N L. R. 171. But in Bombay cases it has been held that a Hindu widow after her marriage may inherit property from her son by her first husband. 29 B 91=6 Bom. L R. 779; 26 B. 388=4 Bom. L. R. 73; 28 M 425; 6 N L. R. 103; 11 A 330; 8 Ind. Cas. 269; 20 A. 476; 10 W R. 34; 4 Bom. L. R. 73 Now the question is does a Hindu widow who has ceased to be a Hindu before her marriage by conversion, forfeit her rights to her husband's property? According to Calcutta and Madras decisions she does—19 C. 289 (F. B.); 41 Mad. 1078 (F. B) 48 Ind. Cas 50 (F B.). But according to the Allahabad decision she does not. 35 A. 466, 11 A. L J. 678. A mother does not lose her right by remarriage in cases when the marriage is recognised as valid custom. A. I. R 1933 Lah. 817; see also A. I. R. 1932 All 617=1932 A. L. J. 941; 5 Luck. 689.

Alienation—An alienation made by a Hindu widow without any legal necessity will not bind the reversioner, even during her lifetime, if she remarries whether, if a custom were proved according to which a remarrying widow is entitled to retain property inherited from her husband, such a custom would not be given effect to inspite of the provisions of the Widows' Remarriage Act.—15 Ind. Cas. 602, 8 Ind. Cas. 269; 34 L W. 967=1931 M. W. N. 1257=62 M. L. J. 131=A. I. R. 1932 M. 102

Guardianship of children of deceased husband on the re-marriage of his widow.

3. On the remarriage of a Hindu widow, if neither the widow nor any other person has been expressly constituted, by the Will or testamentary disposition of the deceased husband, the guardian of his children, the father or paternal grand-father or the mother, or the paternal grand mother, of the deceased husband, or any male relative of the deceased husband, may petition the highest Court, having original jurisdiction in civil cases in the place where the deceased husband was domiciled at the time of his death, for the appointment of some proper person to be guardian of the said children and thereupon it shall be lawful for the said Court, if it shall think fit, to appoint such guardian, who, when appointed, shall be entitled to have the care and custody of the said children, or of any of them, during their minority, in the place of their mother; and in making such appointment, the Court shall be guided, so far as may be, by the laws and rules in force touching the guardianship of children who have neither father nor mother:

Provided that, when the said children have not property of their own sufficient for their support and proper education whilst minors, no such appointment shall be made otherwise than with the consent of the mother, unless the proposed guardian shall have given security for the support and proper education of the children whilst minors.

Notes.—Vide 11 B. 119. Loses right of guardianship.—10 M. L. J. 309 But does not lose her right to give in her son by her former husband to adoption—33 B. 102. But see 24 B. 89 Section 3 only deprives her of her preferential right to act as guardian of her children by her first husband but it does not compel the Court to remove her from such guardianship. 15 C. W. N. 579; 38 C. 863 See also 4 A. 195. Mother does not lose right of guardianship of minor son on remarriage where remarriage is permitted by custom. A. I. R. 1933 Lah. 817.

Nothing in this Act to render any childless widow capable of inheriting.

4. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to render any widow, who, at the time of the death of any person leaving any property, is a childless widow, capable of inheriting the whole or any share of such property, if before the passing of this Act, she would have been incapable of inheriting the same by reason of her being a childless widow.

Saving of rights of widow marrying, except as provided in sections 2, 3 and 4.

5. Except as in the three preceding sections is provided, a widow shall not, by reason of her re-marriage, forfeit any property, or any right to which she would otherwise be entitled; and every widow who has remarried shall have the same rights of inheritance as she would have had, had such marriage been her first marriage.

Note.—Vide 11 W. R. 82.

Ceremonies constituting valid marriage to have same effect on widow's marriage.

6. Whatever words spoken, ceremonies performed, or engagements made, on the marriage of a Hindu female who has not been previously married, are sufficient to constitute a valid marriage, shall have the same effect, if spoken, performed or made on the marriage of a Hindu widow, and no marriage shall be declared invalid on the ground that such words, ceremonies or engagements are inapplicable to the case of a widow.

Consent to remarriage of minor widow.

7. If the widow remarrying is a minor whose marriage has not been consummated, she shall not re-marry without the consent of her father, or, if she has no father, of her paternal grand father, or, if she has no such grandfather, of her mother, or failing all these, of her elder brother, or, failing also brothers, of her next male relative.

Punishment for abetting marriage made contrary to this section.

All persons knowingly abetting a marriage made contrary to the provisions of this section shall be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding one year, or to fine, or to both.

Effect of such marriage.

Proviso.

And all marriages made contrary to the provisions of this section may be declared void by a Court of law : Provided, that in any question regarding the validity of a marriage made contrary to the provisions of this section, such consent as is aforesaid shall be presumed until the contrary is proved, and that no such marriage shall be declared void after it has been consummated.

Consent to remarriage of major widow.

In the case of a widow who is of full age, or whose marriage has been consummated, her own consent shall be sufficient consent to constitute her remarriage lawful and valid.

Notes.—The marriage of a minor widow is not valid unless there has been consent of the person enumerated. 12 Ind Cas. 623

Power to assess individual members of certain firms, association and companies

"23A. (1) Where the Income tax Officer is satisfied that any firm or other association of individuals carrying on any business, other than a Hindu undivided family or a company, is under the control of one member thereof, and that such firm or association has been formed or is being used for the purpose of evading or reducing the liability to tax of any member thereof, he may, with the previous approval of the Assistant Commissioner, pass an order that the sum payable as income-tax by the firm or association shall not be determined, and thereupon the share of each member in the profits and gains of the firm or association shall be included in his total income for the purpose of his assessment thereon.

Explanation.—A member of a firm or association who owns the whole or the major portion of the capital of the firm or association shall not by reason only of that fact be deemed to control the firm or association.

(2) Where the Income-tax Officer is satisfied that a company is under the control of not more than five of its members and that its profits and gains are allowed to accumulate beyond its reasonable needs existing and contingent, having regard to the maintenance and development of its business, without being distributed to the members, or that a reasonable part of its profits and gains, having regard to the said needs, has not been distributed to its members in such manner as to render the amount distributed liable to be included in their total income, and that such accumulation or failure to distribute is for the purpose of preventing the imposition of tax upon any of the members in respect of their shares in the profits and gains so accumulated or not distributed, the Income-tax Officer may, with the previous approval of the Assistant Commissioner, pass an order that the sum payable as income-tax by the company shall not be determined, and thereupon the proportionate share of each member in the profits and gains of the company, whether such profits and gains have been distributed to the members or not, shall be included in the total income of such member for the purpose of his assessment thereon:

Provided that this sub-section shall not apply to any company which is a subsidiary company or in which the public are substantially interested.

Explanation.—For the purpose of this sub section,—

(a) a company shall be deemed to be a subsidiary company if, by reason of the beneficial ownership of shares therein, the control of the company is in the hands of a company not being a company to which the provisions of this sub section apply or of two or more companies none of which is a company to which those provisions apply;

Provided that nothing herein contained shall authorise an income-tax Officer to assess any income, profits or gains which have escaped assessment or have been assessed at too low a rate in respect of which he is debarred from issuing a notice under section 34.

(2) For the purpose of making an assessment under sub-section (1), the Income-tax Officer may serve a notice upon such person requiring him to furnish, within such time not being less than seven days as may be specified in the notice, a return in the same form and verified in the same manner as a return under sub section (2) of section 22, setting forth (along with such other particulars as may be provided for in the notice) his total income for each of the completed previous years comprised in the period first referred to in sub-section (1) and his estimated total income for the period from the expiry of the last such completed previous year to the probable date of his departure ; and the provisions of the Act shall, so far as may be, apply as if the notice were a notice issued under sub-section (2), section 22.

Where any such claim is made, and assessment shall be made on the basis of the income, profits and gains of the said period, and if an amount of tax has already been paid in respect of the income, profits and gains of the previous year exceeding the amount payable on the basis of such assessment, a refund shall be given of the difference.

(4) Where an assessment is to be made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) the Income-tax Officer may serve on the person whose income, profits and gains are to be assessed, or, in the case of a firm, on any person who was a member of such firm at the time of its discontinuance, or, in the case of a company, on the principal officer thereof, a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under sub-section (2) of section 22, and the provisions of this Act, shall so far as may be, apply accordingly as if the notice were a notice issued under that sub-section.

We think, in the first place, that such a provision is unnecessary in view of the provisions of sub-section (1) of the new section 23 A which gives power to the income-tax authorities to treat the members of a firm as individuals, ignoring the constitution of the firm as such, and of his undoubted power under the Act as it now stands to refuse registration to a concern which on the face of the deed of partnership is not a firm as defined in the Act. In addition to this we observe that there is undoubtedly a large body of opinion which holds that the sub-section would place in the hands of the Income-tax Officers a power which, although it might not in actual practice be abused is liable to be misconceived and thus to hamper and discourage the formation of perfectly genuine partnership for business purposes At the same time we realise that it should not be possible for persons to obtain registration of an enterprise as a registered firm which is in fact nothing more than an one man concern and we think the object in view can be satisfactorily made by making provision for the verification of an application for registration and by imposing an amendment of section 52 of the Act a penalty upon any one who makes a false verification. Notes —The object of this Bill is to idemnify officers of Government and other persons for acts done bonafide in the course of martial law during the recent disorders and to provide for the continuance of the sentences passed by Courts established under martial law. Such legislation is inevitable after a period of martial law, which is in its nature an extra legal proceeding. If officers are called on to discharge onerous and difficult duties in a time of emergency, they are to receive reasonable protection. The Bill goes no further than to effect this purpose. It gives protection only to acts done in good faith and in a reasonable belief that they were necessary for the purpose of restoring or maintaining order. It thus leaves open the questions of fact in any given case to be considered nothing to prejudice the committee's take upon its report. 1. This Act may be called The Indemnity Act, 1919.

Indemnity of Government officer and other person for certain acts

2. No suit or other legal proceedings whatsoever, whether civil or criminal, shall lie in any Court of law against any officer of Government, whether civil or military, or against any other person acting under the orders of any such officer for or on account of or inr espect of any act, matter or thing ordered or done or purporting to have been ordered or done for the purpose of maintaining or restoring order in any part of British India where martial law was enforced, on or after the 30th of March, 1919, and before the 26th of August, 1919, by any such officer or person : Provided that such officer or person has acted in good faith and in a reasonable belief that his action was necessary for the said purposes ; and if any such proceeding has been instituted before the passing of this Act it is heredy discharged.

Notes.—In Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 4 Q.B. 225 ; 6 Q. B. 1, and action for assault and imprisonment was brought before the Queen's Bench against the Governor of Jamaica, who upon the outbreak of a rebellion in Jamaica had proclaimed martial law and taken various measures for the suppression of the rebellion, in the course of which the acts were committed for which this action was brought. The defendant in one of his pleas alleged that the grievances complained of were covered by an act of Indemnity which had been passed in 1866 by the Jamaica Legislature and that the action therefore could not be maintained. To this the plaintiff replied that the defendant was still Governor at the passing of the Act of Indemnity, which could, therefore, only have become law by his consent. It was also urged in argument that an Act of the Jamaica Legislature could not bar the plaintiff's right to maintain an action in England. Held (1) that the Governor of a Colony can legally give his consent to a bill in which he is personally interested ; (2) that the Acts of a Colonial Legislature must be treated in accordance with the principles of the comity of nations, that consequently where by the Colonial Law an act complained of is lawful, such act, though it would have been wrongful if committed here, cannot be made the ground of an action in an English Court, and that the same reasoning applies where an act is afterwards legalised by a Colonial Statute.

Rules of evidence.

3. For the purposes of section 2 a certificate of a Secretary to Government that any act was done under the orders of an officer of Government shall be conclusive proof thereof, and all action taken for the aforesaid purposes shall be deemed to have been taken in good faith and in a reasonable belief that it was necessary therefor unless the contrary is proved.

Notes.—"The only principle on which the law of England tolerates martial law." said the Law Officers of the Crown in 1838, "is necessity ; its introduction can be justified only by necessity ; and if it survives the necessity on which alone it rests, for a single moment, it becomes instantly a mere exercise of lawless violence "

THE JUDICIAL OFFICERS' PROTECTION ACT, 1850.

ACT NO. XVIII OF 1850.

PASSED ON THE 4TH APRIL, 1850.

An Act for the protection of Judicial Officers.

Preamble.

FOR the greater protection of Magistrates and others acting judicially; It is enacted as follows:—

Non-liability to suit of officers acting judicially, for official acts done in good faith, and of officers executing warrants and orders.

1. No Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector, or other person acting judicially, shall be liable to be sued in any Civil Court for any act done or ordered to be done by him in the discharge of his judicial duty, whether or not within the limits of his jurisdiction: Provided that he at the time, in good faith, believed himself to have jurisdiction to do or order the Act complained of; and no officer of any Court or other person, bound to execute the lawful warrants or orders of any such Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector or other 'person acting judicially' shall be liable to be sued in any Civil Court, for the execution of any warrant or order, which he would be bound to execute, if within the jurisdiction of the person issuing the same.

Notes—A Judge is privileged in respect of any words, relevant to the issue, uttered by him, while acting judicially, in a case within his jurisdiction, although such words convey an imputation upon a person not judicially before him. To maintain an action of slander, the irrelevency must be so gross as to afford no room for the hypothesis of honest mistake.

ACT No. XII OF 1880.

RECEIVED THE G-G'S ASSENT ON THE 9TH JULY, 1880.

An Act for the appointment of persons to the Office of Kazi.

WHEREAS by the preamble to Act No. XI of 1864* (An Act to repeal the law relating to the offices of Hindu and Muhammadan Law officers and to the offices of Kazi-ul-Kazzat and of Kazi, and to abolish the former offices), it was (among other things) declared that it was inexpedient that the appointment of the Kazi-ul Kazaat, or of City, Town or Pargana Kazis, should be made by the Government, and by the same Act the enactments relating to the appointment by the Government of the said officers were repealed; and whereas by the usage of the Muhammadan community in some parts of British India the presence of Kazis appointed by the Government is required at the celebration of marriages and the performance of certain other rites and ceremonies, and it is therefore expedient that the Government should again be empowered to appoint persons to the office of Kazi; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Power to appoint Kazis for any local area.

2. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any considerable number of the Muhammadans resident in any local area desire that one or more Kazis should be appointed for such local area, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, after consulting the principal Muhammadan residents of such local area, select one or more fit persons and appoint him or them to be Kazis for such local area.

If any question arises whether any person has been rightly appointed Kazi under this section, the decision thereof by the Local Government shall be conclusive.

The Local Government may, if it thinks fit, suspend or remove any Kazi appointed under this section who is guilty of any misconduct in the execution of his office, or who is for a continuous period of six months absent from the local area for which he is appointed, or leaves such local area for the purpose of residing elsewhere, or is declared an insolvent, or desires to be discharged, from the office, or who refuses or becomes in the opinion of the Local Government unfit, or personally incapable, to discharge the duties of the office.

When any Kazi is suspended or removed under section 2, his naib or naibs (if any) shall be deemed to be suspended or removed, as the case may be.

to prevent any one acting as Kazi

(c) to prevent any person discharging any of the functions of a Kazi.
